The Management

High School Girl Favors 'Convertible' Fashions

This Fall promises to open a bag of fashion tricks that can easily be worked to advantage by the high schooler anxious to achieve a back-to-school wardrobe as neat and smart in class as it is perky and gay at informal Sophomore Dances.

Taking her cue from Big Sister at College, Miss High Schooler favors "convertible" fashions, so abundant in color and detail, that can be mixed and matched and switched about for suitable wear day in and day out of every school semester.

Perhaps the most functional, as well as attractive garments for the high school girl carefully planning the basics of her "go for everything" wardrobe, are jumpers and skirts. These literally pave the way to a varied wardrobe that will please budget-conscious mothers and fashion-aware daughters alike.

Skirts Will Whirl!
This year her jumper may be of soft crease-resisting wool jersey, pleated from shoulder to hem, or of sturdy, gaily hued cotton corduroy. Her skirt will be a whirling circle, possibly of washable worsted with a bright plaid on one side and reversible to a contrasting solid tone on the other, or a straight, slim, Paris endorsed skirt in a worsted or monotone tweed.

With jumpers and skirts on hand, the schooler can begin to plan a modest-in-size but versatile wardrobe that can easily be added to as her budget permits, or the occasion arises. To wear over blouses and skirts or with her jumper, there are snug, fleece lumber-jackets, belted cardigan jackets in warm tweedy materials, plaid wool jackets tailored just like dad's smoking jacket, gaily colored diminutive woolen boxy jackets and, of course, classic tailored suits with jackets and skirts that can be switched about for a variety of ensembles, or smartly worn together.

The lumber-jackets often have knitted waistlines and cuffs as well as top-to-bottom zip closings that help make them particularly draft-resistant. The cardigan jackets may also be worn loose without their belts and the tiny box jackets may be found in either contrasting or companion fabrics to her skirts and jumpers. They are usually styled with short, cuffed sleeves.

Mix-Match Blouses
Blouses for the high schooler vary in fabric almost as much as they do in appearance. All are effectively styled to mix and match with her skirts and jumpers.

Wool jersey, cotton gingham and broadcloth, and nylon are just a few of the long wearing, easy-to-tend fabrics blouses are available

Dr. H. C. Hassell Dies In Alabama

Dr. H. Clay Hassell, a summer visitor to Waynesville for the past forty years, died last week in Tuscaloosa, Ala. He was a cousin of Robert McLean.

Dr. Hassell, who rose to national recognition in the dentistry profession, retired from active practice six years ago.

Survivors include the widow, Mrs. Elizabeth McLean Hassell; one sister, Mrs. L. P. Anders of Tuscaloosa, and one brother, John P. Hassell, of Route 1, Tuscaloosa.

Farmers Use Land Banks
Close to 7,000 more farmers got loans through the cooperative land bank system in the calendar year of 1949 than in the previous year. A total of $9,522 obtained loans of more than $182 million as compared to 1948 when 32,524 obtained loans for $151 million. The number of loans paid in full before maturity declined approximately a third in 1949 over the previous year. As of December 31, 1949, 303,343 farmers had land bank loans outstanding amounting to nearly $900 million.

Revised for high school wear is the long torso line middie blouse that mother used to wear. Carrying over their popularity from last season are cotton shirts styled just like brother's. These can be had in any number of pleasing pastel tints. A close copy of what her college sister wears is the wool jersey shirt with its three-quarter length sleeves and diminutive collar detailing.

Blouse styles that go equally well in class and at after-football-game-dances are the cotton and nylon types.

A Great American Custom

By ALICE DENHOFF

A BARBECUE is a great American custom, whether it is a huge open-air rally affair or a gathering of two in a postage-stamp sized yard. Modernized for city slickers and suburbanites—for the custom was its beginnings circa 1700—and made easy by clever little portable grills that burn charcoal or briquettes, and using such sissy accessories as asbestos mitts and long-handled forks, a barbecue's main ingredient, meat remains the same.

Thick-as-thiek steaks and chops are all-time favorites, easiest to "portion" out; spareribs are traditional, and thick ham slices "do us beautiful" over glowing coals (never an active flame, please!). Cubes of veal, lamb, beef, strung on metal skewers often alternated with whole mushrooms and/or onion slices; "wieners", bacon and pork sausage, each and all taste wonderful when cooked and consumed all fresco.

Spicy Sauces
Subtle, spicy sauces turn a chop or anything else in the meat line into "barbecue" and night-before marination is the favorite method. Tossing a garlic clove or a branch of bay leaf onto the coals sends up an oh-so-subtle flavor and a pressing invitation to dine, while the meat cooks, and what could be nicer. Take your cue from the most popular picnic-going: if it rains, fix the charcoal to your indoor fireplace or failing that, establish the portable grill right in the kitchen. Choose your fare, count noses and get busy.

Even the most fastidious, fussy eaters will fall to when they sniff the delightful aroma of barbecued "wieners." To serve 6, brown 1/2 c. chopped onion in 2 tsp. salad oil. Add 1/2 c. lemon juice, tsp. vinegar, 1/2 c. catsup, tsp. Worcestershire sauce, tsp. each mustard and celery salt, 1/4 c. brown sugar and 1/2 c. water. Simmer for 30 min. Arrange 2 lb. frankfurters on metal skewers. Place 6 inches above glow; 7 coals of barbecue pit, and broil for 45 min. Brush often with barbecue sauce and turn every 5 min.

To wind up, some barbecue pointers, starting off with the admonition to trim most of fat from meat or drippings will be constantly blazing. When drippings do blaze up, extinguish with a little water. Don't turn meat too often; turn carefully, and avoid puncturing meat with fork while cooking. Vary the vinegar; try tarragon or wine vinegar for a new barbecue flavor. Cook bacon and sausage in skillet over coals to keep drippings from pit. And, again, never barbecue meat over a blazing fire; hot and glowing coals are best. Happy barbecuing!

Unpaid Film Stars Like Playhouse Jobs

Inspired by last year's success and this season's prospects, Peck, Miss McGuire and Ferrer participated in organization of another producing-acting group in Hollywood under the original La Jolla project name of the Actors' company.

They would present plays there in the winter and in La Jolla in the summer, La Jolla remaining the testing ground for new plays, techniques and operational methods.
