Best Since the War

The Western North Carolina Tourist Association in session here expressed exactly for the region what we had learned about local conditions in regards to the past tourist season-the best since the war.

The officials of the Association listed preseason advertising, consistent promotion, and the Cherokee Drama are among the reasons for the banner season.

Dayton's New Record

A Home of Their Own

On Thursday night the Waynesville band will formally move into their own home-the first home they have had since the band was organized in the fall of 1939.

The former gym has been converted into a modern band building such as our group of hard working musicians deserve.

Since 1939, year in and year out, the bands have had to do their work on the stage of the auditorium, and the football field. They have surmounted the many obstacles and hardships, and brought distinguished honors and recognition to themselves and their community on repeated occasions.

The history of the Waynesville band is one of steady progress. Starting with 59 members, the band made their first public appearance on December 2 of 1939, when Santa Claus arrived by train to officially open a trade festival in town. The bands have appeared on scores of occasions since that time, both at home and away.

Last spring the band tied for first place with two other bands in Grade Six music in the state. The classification is the highest in the state, as is the honor.

There are almost 250 students now in the four bands - beginners, juniors, marching, and concert bands. The band owns 60 uniforms, and several instruments, some of which are 10 years old. The library of music is worth several thousands of dollars.

In their exclusive building, the students will have the benefit of undivided attention adequate space, good acoustics and light, and private practice rooms for small groups.

The band deserves the building they have acquired. The band is one of the community's chief assets, and have more than paid for the investment many times over.

Asphalt Ribbons

Haywood's rural roads are becoming ribbons of asphalt over hill and dale. The fact that 109 miles have already been built no doubt surprised many people.

One of the impressive phases of this roadbuilding program is that it has touched every pen by." Today people plan, and study their tawnship, and almost every cove and corner trips. They are eager to go and see places of the county. The 109 miles did not go into long projects, but scores of short roads, We cannot rest on the laurels of a good many of them less than a mile in length.

Such was the case Thursday when mention Company broke records for donating blood to the Red Cross. The truth of the matter, 55 of the 129 giving a pint of blood each were women. A large percentage.

Bless their souls, they gave more in proportion than did the men. Those hale, hearty, loyal women meant business.

But not for a moment would we want to discount what the men gave - they gave willingly, and gave all that was asked of them. That is their spirit. The group gave until they set a new high record for Western Carolina.

Possible Red China Entry Into War, Capital Worry

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON - Top officials in Washington - from Pres Truman on down-are becoming increasingly worried about possibility that Communist China may enter the Korean war-The President made it clear in a fireside chat to the nation th is concerned about the role of Red China. He warned the Chines stay out of Korea

Communist China's consistent herkling of United States with charges of American of Chinese territory is typical of Red propag strategy which often precedes an agaress An attack on United States forces by the Reds would result in a lengthy commit this country to tremendous manpewe material losses for several years.

• FRIENDSHIP-President Truman's letter to Rep Gords Donough, (R) California, in which he said the Marines have a ganda organization "almost equal to Stalin's" is anoth his tendency to place friendship foremost.

The President has told close associates he regarded a friend, that it never occurred to him the Congress his letter in the Congressional Record. He has expl letter was personal, that he believed it would be kept McDonough he has told confidantes, is an old artill he is. The Californian served in France during World did the President. He felt that with such a bond between them, he could safely write to McDonough in a more vigorous style than he would use publicly.

At least, that is the version of the incident being spread in official quarters.

McDonough, however, had written the President proposing that the Marines be given representation Chiefs of Staff equal to that accorded the Army, Navy and Air Fin The President, who has been under considerable pressure from d sources to do this, rejected the idea firmly.

Then there is another consideration. The biennial elections are coming up in a couple of months, and the Previews on questions affecting the Marines are important. And Donough after all is a Republican.

MIRROR OF YOUR MIND.

Can learning be hurried?

Answer: No, writes Dr. George E Carrothers, of the University of Michigan, in School and Society. The most dangerous trend in modern education is the failure of well-meaning parents and of social and civic organizations to recognize that adequate learning takes time. It is cheating unsuspecting students to let them get the idea that an education can be acquired "on the run". Education needs "time studies" like those used in industry to make sure that the relatively little time allotted to learning is not wasted.

overeat? Answer: If you don't think it tends to have this effect, watch the guests at a resort hotel. While you may imagine that you enjoy 'doing nothing," your mind actually keeps right on demanding satisfactions, and since idleness action.

Is there any such thing as "the force of habit"? Answer: Habit really is inertia, not force. If you had to stop and think each morning how to get dressed, it would take you so long you would never get to business. To save effort, you make dressing automatic so that it would be hard to put on the right shoe first if starting with the left was your established habit. But you can break a "bad habit" without too much difficulty if the "drive" you have been satisfying through it finds a more effective channel. For it's drives, not habits, that move you to
