exhibits in the Cherokee agricultural fair.

The Indians later put the $2,000 in prizes into recreational facilities for their schools.

By the time the drama was ready for its premiere July 1, the Historical Association owed $30,000.

The profits from the first season, Mr. Parris reported, were enough not only to pay back that debt, but also to permit the allocation of $30,000 more for expenses season and budget $12,000 for next season.

"We believe," he said, "that it was the only out-door drama in America that showed a profit."

"All the other, older shows were in the red when their seasons closed."

"The Washington drama, 'Faith Of Our Fathers,' which cost $4,000,000 to produce, went far in the red."

Referring to the Cherokee drama, he added, however, that the "second year is always the hardest. The novelty has worn off by then."

Next year's audience will see a better drama, and will be able to see it better.

Mr. Parris said the script will be rewritten in spots, and polished and tightened, and the music will be re-scored and more closely attuned to the mountain setting.

Improvements also are planned for the dance sequences at least one of the square dances will be replaced by an old mountain folk dance, and an Indian ceremonial dance is planned as an addition.

Physical improvements also will be made on the theater itself.

The two stages, too low to permit some characters to be seen from certain parts of the theater, will be raised.

This will permit spectators sitting in any part of the theater to see all the characters as they appear on these stages.

Workers will build an extra rest room and another concession stand.

The rain shelter, which hampered the sound reception in the top rows of the theater, will be raised, and the sound and lighting improved.

Next summer also, all seats will be reserved seats, with prices scaling from $3 to $1.50.

The people who wanted general admission seats last summer had to come to the theater three to four hours ahead of time and take their seats to be sure that they would have them by curtain time.

Apple Growers Try To Detect Type Of Fruit

A feature of Saturdays' program was getting a group of orchardmen to taste apples and try to identify them. R. H. Boone was the winner. The bits of apples were all peeled and handed out from a dish. All the growers had to go on was the actual taste. Shown in the picture, left to right, are: Turner Cathey, master of ceremonies; Mr. Pettigrew, manager Bolling Hall Orchard; R. H. Boone, president Smoky Mountain Apple Growers Association; Cosby Frady, owner Johnson Orchards; Z. L. Massey; Henry Francis; Lawrence Cogburn; C. D. Ketner; Harper Everson; and Wiley Franklin. In front are Mrs. W. H. Massey, scorekeeper, and Richard Barber, chairman. (Staff Photo.)

If you want a really creamy frosting, try one made with cream cheese. Leave a three-ounce package of cream cheese out of the refrigerator to soften, then blend it with three tablespoons of light cream, adding one tablespoon at a time. Blend in gradually two-and-one-half to three cups of sifted confectioners' sugar and two squares (two ounces) of unsweetened chocolate. Beat until smooth with an eighth teaspoon of salt.
