U.N. Is Moving To Glass House

By ADELAIDE KERR AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK—The United Nations is moving into its new, permanent home in the midst of some of the stormiest political weather it has ever endured.

Enough workers remain at Lake Success to handle the work entailed by the General Assembly. A few hundred will remain at the old Long Island headquarters until June.

U.N.'s new home has been one of the most complicated housing, furnishing and housekeeping jobs of all time. It had to suit 60 member nations with tastes as far apart as the poles.

WORLD CAPITOL—The new U.N. headquarters.

to work in it. So the secretariat building has a heating and cooling system adjustable in each office by the twist of a knob.

U.N. Unity Is the Keynote

"All these things were kept in mind when furnishings were chosen," says Abel Sorensen, head of Interior Design of the U.N. project.

When you visit U.N.'s new home, you will see a building that looks like a book standing on end, built of steel, marble, aluminum and glass.

Upstairs, the secretariat building's glass walls are lined with offices. Many are small in order to spread the window space as far as it will go.

In the upper part of the building is the secretary general's five-room suite—office, meeting room, private living room, bedroom, kitchen and bath.

The suites of the eight assistant secretaries general are smaller, but equally modern.

When the entire U.N. headquarters is finished the secretariat skyscraper will be linked to the other two main buildings—the meeting hall area and the General Assembly Hall.

"Copy Desks" for Committees

The meeting hall building will have some of the world's biggest and most up to date committee rooms. Seventy foot tables—some shaped like a giant horseshoe and some like a huge "C"—are now being made.

The committee rooms will be paneled in mahogany, walnut or teakwood and their furniture will be of the same wood.

The same building will hold the delegates' lounges. The main one will be huge—divided into three sections. The center section, for recreation will be furnished in big sofas of brown, beige and ivory leather.

Prof's Idea Boosts World Relations

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Since the '30's, when he was adviser to foreign students at the University of Wisconsin, John E. Merkel, Jr., has been working on a unique idea.

Through his efforts a non-profit educational organization known as Unofficial Ambassadors, Inc., has been formed here with the backing of a large group of important citizens.

The idea is to send Unofficial Ambassadors, teams of talented, carefully-selected young people from foreign countries, on tours with mobile museums across the country.

"It's a sort of Voice of America in reverse," Mr. Merkel tells me. He says Unofficial Ambassadors will give illustrated lectures and programs of dance and music for school, civic club and general public audiences.

"If you are really going to go to know people from other lands you've got to see them, talk to them, learn their culture and way of living," Mr. Merkel says.

Original financing of the program of Unofficial Ambassadors, Inc., will be by membership fees and by grants-in-aid from foundations. The group's first goal is to raise $50,000 to put the first truck museum on the road by next fall.

Mr. Merkel hopes final control of the plan will be in the hands of state and local school officials, with state universities taking over a large portion of the responsibility.

Mr. Merkel is executive director. Other trustees include Mrs. Harold Burton, wife of the associate justice of the Supreme Court, Dr. Harold E. Davis, director of inter-American studies, American University, and Mme. Alfred Janniaux, wife of the internationally famous portrait painter.

NARROW ESCAPE COSTS $100

LIBERTY, N. Y.—(AP)—When a passenger car and a light truck he was driving collided head-on near here, Charles Bartels, a worker on the New York City reservoir project in this area, got a vise-like grip on the steering wheel and tried to pull out of harm's way.

He escaped injury, but after he was hauled from the wreckage discovered that he had gripped the wheel so hard that he forced from a ring he was wearing a diamond worth $100.

stered in Danish blue wool.

Up on the roof will be the cafeteria for the secretariat and the restaurant for the delegates, rimmed by a wide terrace overlooking the East River.

The General Assembly building, which is expected to be finished by the summer of 1952 will be a big domed structure, providing seats for delegations, press and 1,000 spectators.

Glass Menagerie At Strand For Three Days

From the Drama Critics' Award play by Tennessee Williams, "The Glass Menagerie," has been fashioned, at last, the long-awaited motion picture.

Produced for Warner Bros., the screen drama which co-stars Jane Wyman, Kirk Douglas, Gertrude Lawrence and Arthur Kennedy, begins its local engagement at the Strand Theatre late show Saturday night, also Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

"The Glass Menagerie," which reputedly carried off more prizes in a single year than any other play in the history of the Theatre, is the story of a middle-class family consisting of a mother of great spirit and indomitability, her crippled daughter, whose only happiness is her collection of small animals, and a moody son who works in a warehouse while he dreams of the sea.

Jane Wyman, as the lame girl, performs with the same ethereal quality she revealed in her Academy Award-winning role as the deaf-mute in "Johnny Belinda," while Kirk Douglas deviates from his standard rugged parts in the role of the sincere 'gentleman caller'.
