Growing Charlotte Overflows Into Countryside

Freight cars in the foreground and an expanding business skyline in the background typify Charlotte's development as a distributing center between wars. Much retail business is being forced by traffic and parking conditions into neighborhood areas. Lower left: A typical neighborhood shopping center. Lower right: Selwyn Village, one of the many apartment developments springing up all around the outskirts of Charlotte. But these developments fail to keep up with the ever-growing demand for housing. (AP Photos).

Animal's Diet Important In Disease Resistance

The amount of protein an animal eats has a direct bearing on its resistance to disease. The disease-fighting antibodies found in the blood are made from proteins. And, if an animal's diet does not contain enough proteins, the body is unable to manufacture sufficient antibodies to protect itself against invading disease germs.

Studies of protein-deficient rats show that they cannot withstand infections as well as normal rats. Neither can they be vaccinated satisfactorily against contagious diseases, since vaccination should produce a good supply of antibodies in the blood.

Proteins alone, however, are not the whole answer to disease resistance. Unless other nutritional elements are fed to an animal, its body is unable to store up supplies of protein for future use.

In other cases, even though the diet is adequate, various types of illness may prevent protein storage, leaving an animal easy prey to infectious diseases.

Protein deficiency does not develop quickly if an animal has been well nourished in the past. Warm-blooded animals hold on to their protein reserves with "tenacity." Only after prolonged malnutrition do animals lose their defenses against infections.

Attitude Toward Divorce Changing Fast in America

The American attitude toward divorce has changed from "severe condemnation" to acceptance as "perhaps inevitable and even necessary," according to a Yale University sociologist.

"A high divorce rate," John Sirjamaki declares, "is logically necessary when marriages are based on individualist and erotic criteria."

"With our emphasis upon personality attraction and romance in selection of marriage partners, we must expect many couples to discover themselves seriously mismatched psychologically and unable to live tractably with each other. When couples frustrate each other in the basic purposes of marriage, they very quickly fall out of love and have to be freed from unhappy or intolerable marriages."

The Yale sociologist predicts that America's divorce rate will remain high. Although he says that now "divorce seems pretty much a part of our way of family life," Mr. Sirjamaki cites the "bumper crop" of babies during this past decade, social legislation in housing, employment, urban redesign and social welfare as "good signs on the horizon."

Such stabilizing action, he states, is "increasingly important in keeping families intact." In addition, Mr. Sirjamaki praises the new emphasis on intelligent discussion of and education in marriage and family problems. "All of these can affect the divorce rate; it is amenable to rational control."

In 1946, Mr. Sirjamaki says, the U.S. reached a peak with 610,000 divorces, roughly one failure in every three marriages. He estimated that at present one of every four to five marriages results in divorce. Similar trends in divorce are found in virtually every European society.

Goes to Trial

THE DEATH penalty was asked for Ernest Ingenito, pictured here as he went to court in Woodbury, N. J., to be tried on charges of slaying five of his wife's relatives on Nov. 17. Four others, wounded during his shooting spree, are recovering. Two psychiatrists have ruled him sane. (International Soundphoto)

Needs of Flowers

A flower gardener may bring disaster to his young plants by disregarding their special needs as to light, moisture and plant food, when plants are placed outdoors. Not all plants tolerate full sunlight while some require it. Too often they become crowded before they can develop into specimen plants, and much too often they are overfertilized, especially in their early stages of growth. Don't forget the value of hot weather mulch of peat, ground corn cobs, or rotten straw and manure, to conserve moisture and reduce the soil temperature for the growing roots.
