Jesus Meets Human Need

Jesus called the twelve disciples to Him and sent them out two by two, to preach, and He gave them power over unclean spirits.

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—Mark 6:7-13

King Herod heard of Jesus (for His name was spread abroad), and the king said Jesus was John the Baptist risen from the dead.

Jesus and the disciples went to the desert to rest, but the multitudes followed them; Jesus felt sorry and preached to them.

From the sea shore Jesus saw His disciples rowing hard in a boat, so He walked on the water to them. MEMORY VERSE—Mark 6:34.

DOIN' WHAT COMES NATURALLY

FORT WORTH, Tex.—(AP)—The smallest basketball player in the Southwest Conference this season, TCU's Johnny Taylor, comes by his court skill most naturally. His mother knew a thing or two about the dribble and shoot business.
 As Rose Mendel of Houston, Mrs. Taylor played several seasons with the Admission team in Gulf Coast circles. She was named AAU all-state two straight years.
 The first Dose Bowl football game was played in 1902 but there wasn't a second contest until 1916.

Dr. Irvin M. Weir, County Health Officer, is having their children examined against certain diseases. If a child should have a cough, showing that he has been whooping cough, this may be secured either family physician or Health Department.
 Dr. Weir pointed out that the law means protecting child from these serious diseases.
 Thanks to the use of smallpox is no longer the thing it once was. Whooping cough, as needs to be reminded, is serious and may be fatal.
 As an aid to parents in their preschool children, Dr. Weir gave the school Typhoid and Preschool through February 20.
 On Wednesday, February Clinic will be at the School at 9 in the morning school and typhoid shots. The afternoon it will be at the School to give the typhoid shots.
 On Thursday, February only visit will be at the Luska School at 9 a.m. and typhoid shots.
 On Tuesday, February Clinic will be at the Bethel Typhoid shots will be at 9 o'clock, and preschool at 9 o'clock.

Leaving Tot With "Sitter"

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.
 MANY a mother writes of the child under three or four who is never happy out of her sight. What a scene when this mother tries to leave this child with a baby sitter or in the nursery department of a Sunday school or at school when he later enters there!

Every mother should start early, even when the youngster is a mere infant, to have the father or another member of the family or another person seen often by the child for some time take care of him for brief periods, at first while the mother is present and later while she is absent. Always this procedure should be gradual, for a few minutes at first and for slowly-increasing periods later. As soon as the child is old enough to play with others of his age, this play can help him grow less dependent emotionally on his mother.

Common Problem
 The most common problem arises when the parents begin the practice together of leaving the young child with a baby sitter. How difficult it may be for the child from a year to four or five years of age when he discovers suddenly that his parents are going out and leaving him with a person he saw for the first time only a few minutes previously.
 Wiser parents, before their first time of leaving the little child with a baby sitter, employ her to come much earlier in the day, or to come for an afternoon or two while they are home, so the youngster may grow acquainted with her.

Strange Person
 Imagine yourself, a little child, awaking to see a strange person (baby sitter) and to learn that the parents have gone away without telling you they were going. Such an experience by a child may have ill effects for an indefinite period, causing him to have fear that he might be left again and even to dread having his mother out of his sight. He also may have many frightful dreams for months and months. (My bulletin "Fears" may be had by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope to me in care of this paper.) Discerning mothers, who plan to go out, always announce casually to the child the fact in due time, just as they also apprise this child beforehand of any other change in his program which might not prove pleasant to him.
 But suppose that, in spite of all proper precautions, the youngster indicates before the parents are about to go away and leave him with a baby sitter, strong objections to their plans and cries violently as they go. The mother's impulse is to feel very much upset and to betray her feelings to the youngster. If, as she leave him, he cries piteously and clings to her, she may linger and even go back several times to caress him, and all the while he may grow more hysterical and she more upset.
Casual and Final
 She could make it easier for the youngster and herself if she were to make her leaving casual and final, and not even look back. Though the youngster may cry violently as she goes, he may cease crying before she will have gone a block.
 An occasional mother has been so constantly with the child even up to when he is past two or three that she can't have the heart to go out and leave him and to see and hear him cry after her. This mother might more easily gain the fortitude to leave him with a baby sitter if she were to practice gradually at being out of his sight right in the house; later to put on her hat and coat and walk around the block, leaving him with a person he knows, repeating this performance several successive times, each time staying away a bit longer. One mother told me she made eight of such trips during one forenoon and that on the seventh and eighth trips the youngster didn't cry at all as she left.
