Lower prices for eggs are forecast by the department.

SPARROWS FLEE LIGHT

ROCKFORD, Ill.—This city solved its sparrow problem quite accidentally—after it had worked out complicated schemes to kill or rout the birds. When the city installed mercury lights in downtown district the mercury lights "may give off a disturbing sound," pitched so high it is inaudible to human ears, but annoying to the sparrows.

COLORING GOGGLES PROTECT PILOTS FLYING "BLIND"

SOUTHBRIDGE, Mass.—Specially colored goggles are now preventing trainee pilots from peeping into the blue yonder while they learn to fly "blind."

Cadets go up in training craft during sunny days. To stimulate "instrument weather", the Air Corps covers the cockpit windows with amber colored plastic. That allows light to enter, but the trainee can't see through the windows because he wears special goggles designed for the Air Corps by American Optical. The goggles have large lenses that cut out the amber-colored hue. When he wears them, he can see only the dials and controls on the panel, so he must fly by instruments.

The student flies a dual control plane. The second pilot with him, "checking him out," doesn't wear the goggles. He can see through the window and can take control of the plane if the need arises.

The Korean War crisis brought new attention to guayule, the American desert plant that produces natural rubber.

ILLINOIS GOVERNOR URGES MORE DISPLAY OF FLAG

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson thinks there is too little display of the American flag. He said persons should discard the idea that the flag is something to be flown only on Flag Day or the Fourth of July.

"It should be displayed every day on private as well as public buildings, as a constant reminder of the loyalties we all owe to our country and the obligations that rest upon every American, especially during this period of national emergency," Stevenson said.
