Romantic Assist - Flavored Lipstick

By BETTY CLARKE

Lipstick can taste good, too — that is if you like mint.

A new mint flavored lip rouge is said to lend a nice sweet flavor of the mouth without depriving it of its rosebud shade.

'Tis said, also, that its cooling fragrance is a treat after lunch, dinner or smoking, and helps wake up drowsy lips in the morning. It might be difficult to decide whether to eat it or wear it.

It should appeal to the boys who always complain about "that awful lipstick taste." What could be sweeter or more romantic than a mint-flavored kiss.

On the other hand, it might create problems on the romantic scene. Just supposin' your sweetheart is allergic to mint and doesn't know it—all he knows is that your kisses give him an uncomfortable sensation, maybe even spots before the eyes.

Then, too, if the mint lipstick experiment is a success think what we are letting ourselves in for. You'll probably hear about an orange juice lipstick.

LIP LURE... Cooling flavor is a feature of this "mint rose" lipstick.
