Tolerance Is Need Of World, Says Rotary Speaker

Rev. Cato Dick, of Worcester, Mass., told Rotarians here Friday that the world is in dire need of more tolerance. The former Norwegian, in a dynamic address, seemed inspired with the "hills and water of Lake Junaluska" because it reminded him of his native land.

Using modern history as practical examples, the speaker stressed the importance of looking ahead, and seeing the ultimate result of all action. He pointed out that Germany, during World War I, when she had Russia at her knees, sent men into Russia to scatter the seeds of Communism, as a means of further weakening Russia.

"The Labor government of England has shackled industry under the nationalization program. The plan looked good at first, but the same plan in principle looks entirely different as Iran puts it into use on their oil fields," the fiery speaker said.

People who are to succeed, must look further than the immediate future; the future reaction must be determined, he said, as he quoted time and time again: "The mills of the gods grind slowly, but they grind exceedingly fine."
