

White Oak To Be Hosts To Fines Creek Saturday

MRS. GEORGE BORING
Mountaineer Reporter

The regular meeting of the White Oak Community Development Program will be this Saturday night at 8 o'clock at the Community House. At this meeting our community will be hosts to Fines Creek Community Development Program. We are looking for a banner crowd to enjoy the program which is under the sponsorship of our visiting community.

Last Wednesday night the White Oak Community put on an approximately two-hour program at the Fines Creek School, and the chairman Tom Brummitt and several others said it drew the largest crowd of any community meeting yet, unless it was the night they put on at the amateur show. Our players were well supported by folks from their own community too. Chairman George Boring acted as master of ceremonies.

First on the program, was two selections by a male quartet consisting of Robert Fisher, France Teague, Odie Fish and Paul Kirkpatrick. Next came the highlight of the evening, the "Manless Wedding". Taking part in this were: Bride—Estalee Duckett; Groom—Mattie Teague; Preacher—LaVerta Boring; Matron of Honor—Margaret Fish; Bridesmaids—Monatee Galyon and Wilma Messer; Best man—Alpha Teague; Ring bearer—Virginia Ledford; Flower girls—Roslyn Messer and Patsy Davis; Veil carriers—Jane Davis and Janie Williams; Father of Bride—Sarah Ledford; Mother of Bride—Sallie Sutton; Rejected Suitor—Edna Davis, and Ushers—Marcene Lowe and Betty Sue Lowe. This wedding was well received and gave everyone a good laugh.

Five young girls, Frances Conard, Jane Davis, Janie Williams, Oleen and Jean Fish, then sang "Mocking Bird Hill". Other duets were sung by the "Rose Sisters" and the "Playmates".

The skit, "Changing Suitcases," always gets a good laugh and answered the eternal question of who can dress faster, a man or a woman. Robert Fisher proved that a woman can by donning women's apparel and Roslyn was the loser dressing in men's clothes.

A mixed quartet then sang two hymns while the stage was being set for the final play, "Trial by Jury". Characters were: prisoner—Tom Brummitt; Attorney for Defense—Teague Williams; Attorney for State—George Boring; Judge—Mrs. George Boring; Sheriff—Mrs. Rowe Ledford; Foreman of Jury—France Teague. At the close of this play, the prisoner was sentenced to visit the White Oak Community on Pianist for the evening's music was Mrs. Yoder Messer. Our thanks goes again to Monatee Galyon for making us this presentation key.

We would also like to thank Ernest Trantham of Fines Creek for his able assistance.

some side roads and some little-traveled lanes. You will run across ideas and people that have special meaning for you, you will taste flavors that are not commonly known, you will have the joy of discovery and an increasing sense of your own individuality.

And when you find and finish a book that is good for you, you can hold it for a moment in your hand and say, "Here is something that has added to my knowledge and my life."

KITTENS ARE NUTS ABOUT SQUIRREL

THIS BABY SQUIRREL is still a bit cagey, although he's been accepted as part of the family by two kittens. Found by Mrs. Harold Minton, of Philadelphia, after falling from a tree, the tiny squirrel was taken to her home and placed in the care of "Jenny," a motherly cat, who had just a few days before given birth to a litter of kittens. How To Make Marriage Last HARTFORD, Conn.—A system of "divorce prevention" has been worked out by the Rev. Louis M. Hirshson, dean of Church Cathedral in Hartford. All couples married in the past five years were to a special service, which with the traditional sacred music. The marriage ceremony re-read and all were invited to stand and join in renewal marriage promises.

"I have known of churches who became divorced," said. "Yet in my quarters of the ministry, I have known single instances of those who prayed and worshipped habitually, to have become divorced."

THE MAGIC OF BOOKS
By EDWARD PRAGER

It is too bad that we are made to read certain books during our school days. Perhaps if we had never been required to plow through books that to us, at least, were tasteless and heavy, we would in later years be much fonder of books in general, and would read far more than we do.

In books, you gain friends—real people—who will be your companions forever. Books will take you places that you cannot otherwise visit, places that have never existed on this earth, real places that no longer exist. Books will bring you ideas that men of all nations have considered and evolved since the beginning of history. Books will tell you how other men have met life's problems.

Books will teach you how to hit a tennis ball, how to build a boat, how to grow grass, how to be a doctor, lawyer, merchant, scientist, speaker, engineer, writer, teacher... how to do almost anything that men have ever done. Books will excite you, amuse you, rest you, inspire you. Books will give you courage, fortitude, patience, tolerance, wisdom, hope, insight, skill, perseverance, sympathy. Books will make you grow... deeper, broader, taller. Books will help you to understand other men—and to know yourself.

Many of my closest friends are people I have never met, except in books. Herman Verman, and Penrod are still waiting in the barn... and Tom Sawyer is lost in the cave—but he will be rescued, all right. I often walk with Allan Dale, Friar Tuck, and Robin Hood, in Sherwood Forest.

The "Sentimental Education" of Frederic Moreau was part of my own. Julien Sorel was an intimate friend of my youth, and Stendhal himself. I have walked about Russia with Gorki.

I have sailed around the world with Capt. Joshua Slocum, and heard the savages howl when they stepped on the tacks he had strewn around deck to keep them from boarding his boat at night. I have been in Paris in Lapland, in Naples during the plague, and I have walked up the hill to San Michele with Axel Munthe—and I can revisit them all in a twinkling whenever I care to.

I had a good time in Russia with Ariane. I have been down in the coal mines with Zola, and I have done New York City with H. Allen Smith. Leslie N. Broughton taught me how to write paragraphs when I was 19—in a book that weighed less than half a pound. And Long's History of English Literature was my most thrilling mountaintop view of the world of books—the unfolding of the great expanse was a wonder that is still strong.

But you will find your own books—other books as good as the ones I was given, and found, and stumbled upon. You will discover that not only the people in the books, but also those who wrote them, will become your fast friends.

They are friends eminently worth knowing... people with the genius to see deeply, think hard, and to transmit to you the distillation of their life, brain, and spirit. And they will never leave you.

Which books should you read? I cannot name them. George Brandes said that a good book is a book that is good for you. I am sure he did not mean "good for you" in the sense that spinach is said to be good for you; he meant that a book that suits and satisfies your own special appetite is a good book for you.

In choosing books, follow your own bent. It will take you down to Mrs. Grace Morrow and family. The passing of Vinson Morrow was a shock to his many relatives and hosts of friends.
