A classic love story—David and Bathsheba, one of the immortal love pairs of history, as portrayed by Gregory Peck and Susan Hayward in "David and Bathsheba," Technicolor Twentieth Century-Fox spectacle at the Park Theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, Oct. 21, 22 and 23, join the ranks of lovers immortalized on stage and screen. Among them: Romeo and Juliet, Antony and Cleopatra, Camille and Armand, Samson and Delilah.

Bathsheba Returns To The Bathtub As Susan Hayward

After a span of 2950 years, the Biblical siren Bathsheba is back at her bath again, and the movies boast another in a long line of famous bathtub scenes. The charmer, whose love affair with King David began with her bathing in view of the royal palace, thus changing the course of world history, once more was attended by Nubian slaves for her ablutions as pictured in "David and Bathsheba," Twentieth Century-Fox's new Technicolored spectacle starring Gregory Peck and Susan Hayward.

The Park Theatre scheduled the film for Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. For the filming of the important incident, which is adapted from the Second Book of Samuel of the Old Testament, Director Henry King had Miss Hayward bathe standing up in a less-than-waist-high tub. Fifty special studio guards were assigned to keep unauthorized personnel away, while on the set an unprecedented number of newsmen and photographers gathered. Their numbers had to be restricted and their photographs pooled to insure equity for all. At all times, however, great care was exercised to make certain that the onlookers saw no more of Miss Hayward than Gregory Peck and the Technicolor
