

Hollywood Pantomimist Says No Hicks Remain

HOLLYWOOD — There are no hicks or sticks left in America, reports Angna Enters.

Miss Enters, a member of the almost vanished race of pantomimists, goes on a performance tour of the United States and Canada every year. Small-town audiences, which include settlers from miles around, are just as large, alert, and sophisticated as Broadway assemblages, she says.

"We don't have provincial audiences any more," she declared flatly. "Travel, newsreels, movies, and radio, I think, deserve the credit."

Miss Enters, a dark-haired lady with dark, searching eyes, possesses an awesome array of talents. As an authority on theater history and pantomime, she came here recently from her New York home to teach Stewart Granger and Eleanor Parker how to play 18th-century French mimes in "Scaramouche".

She paints — impressions, frequently of fellow performers, in theatrical settings. More than 1,100 of her works have been exhibited in this country and London. She sculpts. She writes. Her autobiography, "Silly Girl", has been purchased for movie production. She authored the stories of two Margaret O'Brien movies, "Lost Angel" and "Tenth Avenue Angel".

As a pantomimist, she usually portrays 12 different characters, to piano accompaniment, in an evening. Her repertoire includes 171 characters ranging from early Egyptian to modern ones like her "Hollywood Horror Story" depicting a hopeful lady's day of trying to be discovered by the movies.

The dictionary defines mime, which Miss Enters is, as synonymous with mimic, but she says there's a difference. A mime creates an imaginary character; a mimic copies a specific person. "Chaplin is a mime. Anybody who takes off Chaplin is a mimic."

Since the demise of vaudeville, Miss Enters said, about the only pantomimists left are clowns.

"Pantomime is good for those nuances of thought for which there are no words or for which too many words would be required. It's showing an emotion or state of mind in its simplest form. You can play any place in the world and be understood."

Jim Martin, Detroit Lions' end from Notre Dame, has been nicknamed "Jughead" since he was a youth and wore short hair cuts.

Marines Seize North Carolina Beach In Practice

Second Division Marines establish a beachhead on the Atlantic shore at Onslow Beach, N. C., in an amphibious invasion as a climax to maneuvers involving 120,000 men and 200 ships. A fighter plane flies over the men, landing craft and tanks on the beach. (AP Wirephoto).

Thanksgiving Day Is Set On Nov. 22

Since Thanksgiving Day is one of the holidays almost everyone observes, there has been considerable discussion as to the date for the observance this year.

According to a release from the Governors' office the date has been inflexibly set on November 22.

Governor Scott's administrative assistant, Ben Rhoney pointed out that the Thanksgiving date isn't as flexible as it used to be. Federal law now prescribes the time and that date again is November 22.

Scattered City

A mythical community is the sixth largest city in the U. S. A. Trailer Coach Manufacturers' Association survey reveals that today about 1,500,000 people in the U. S. live in mobile homes giving "Trailer City" a population which ranks it just below Detroit with 1,637,000.

Maggie PTA Hears Of School Program

John Sloan, principal of the Maggie School was the speaker at the PTA Tuesday evening. He discussed the pending school expansion program, and the advantages of the enlarged schools.

A large crowd filled the auditorium of the school.

Mrs. Cliff White was in charge of the program.

For a good-tasting luncheon dish arranged sliced hard-cooked eggs over fluffy rice, pour over a cheese sauce and top with bits of crisp bacon.

Sorority Pledges Ann Rector

Miss Ann Rector, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Rector of Hazelwood, has been pledged by Alpha Delta Pi at Queens College in Charlotte. Ann graduated last spring from Waynesville Township High School, and is now a freshman at the famous business college.

in the world's most perilous auto race replete with the smell of burning rubber and the odor of exhaust fumes.

All this and more may come to pass if Italian inventor Alberto Basso-Ricci has his way.

Signor Basso-Ricci, 28-year-old Milan radio engineer claims to have invented a machine which will add fragrances and odors to any film story as it is projected on the screen.

His machine, looking something like an army field radio, can be installed in a 1,500 seat movie theatre for about $4,000.

The fragrances and smells would be piped to each seat in the movie house. The machine works automatically. Once started it can provide more than 30 different scents, fragrances, odors or smells as they are called for on the screen.

Signor Basso-Ricci's machine is equally efficient whether the movie's scenes are in the kitchen, the rainy tropics, or a beach. The appetizing odor of a steak frying in butter, for instance, is something he guarantees.

For movie advertising, Signor Basso-Ricci thinks he has something that manufacturers have been waiting for a long time. For example, the candy maker's slide would be projected on the screen just as the fragrance of fudge in the making hits the nostrils.

The movie-goer allergic to smells or scents can turn off the outlet at his seat.
