Receives Farmer's Degree

Massie Osborne of Clyde has received the highest FFA degree in the State, the American Farmer Award. He was first notified July 30 at the State FFA meeting that he would be one of 16 North Carolina young men to win this award. At that time he was presented $50, half the award money, and also an expense-paid trip to Kansas City, Mo. last week to the National Meeting where he would have received the rest of his cash award. But he had been called into the army and was unable to be present. He is now completing basic training at Fort Belvoir, Va. This picture shows him last summer with twin Guernsey calves. Engineers At Work On Sewer Survey

The survey for a network of sewer lines in Allens Creek got underway Wednesday.

G. R. Reagan, engineer in charge, and several assistants, have started the survey of the area, and with favorable weather, should have the work completed within ten days. Then the engineers will make maps, and work specifications for at least three main trunk lines, and all the connecting laterals in the area.

G. C. Ferguson, town manager, said that present plans are for the town water department crews to put in the sewer lines just as soon as the engineers finish making the survey.

No estimate of the cost can be made until the engineers complete their work, Mr. Ferguson said.

Shuford Speaks At Rally In Canton Tuesday

"The Republicans are advocating a change in the coming election... but the only change they want is to get in..." declared George Shuford, of Asheville, Democratic nominee for 12th District congressman, as he addressed a Democratic rally in Canton's town hall Tuesday night.

Approximately 100 Haywood County Democrats, including precinct chairmen, heard Shuford declare he "had unlimited faith in the leadership of the Democratic party." The candidate urged them to "go to the polls and vote... to see that their neighbors and their neighbor's neighbors registered and voted in the November election."

"Elections are won from the precinct level rather than from the top ranks of any party," Shuford said, "and it is up to you to see that all Democrats register and vote in the November election... the Republicans will take care of themselves."

The congressional candidate was introduced by Loranzo Smathers, 12th District Young Democratic organizer.

Charles B. McCrary, chairman of the Haywood County Democratic Executive committee, spoke briefly during the meeting along with Bill Byers. Both urged support of the full Democratic ticket in November.

Democratic rallies are scheduled for Bethel school house Thursday night when Gene Alley, of Waynesville, will speak.

A Cruso rally is booked for Friday night with Bill Byers as speaker.

Judge Sam Cathey, of Asheville, will speak to a rally of Democrats at the court house in Waynesville Saturday evening. A motorcade will form at the Municipal parking lot in Canton at 6:30 and pick up other motorists at Clyde and continue on to the courthouse.

Judge Felix Alley will address a final county rally at the same location, October 31.

More Civic Clubs Add Endorsement To Bond Issue

The Kiwanis Club, the American Legion, and the Legion Auxiliary went on record this week as unanimously endorsing the bond issue for the expansion of the water system of Waynesville.

The Rotary Club led off with such action at their meeting last Friday.

The two Legion groups took the action at their meetings Wednesday. The Kiwanis Club voted to endorse the bond issue after hearing a personal report from President Jimmy Childress.

Indications today were that a number of other groups here would pass the same resolution in the immediate future.

Civic Group Puts Up $655 To Help Win Bond Election

When 30 civic leaders met last night to discuss plans for the water bond election, they were told that some money would be needed to cover expenses.

J. M. Long, finance chairman, reminded the group that "even money would not satisfy thirst when the spigots go dry—so let's get busy and keep them from going dry."

The group had just heard an official report on the low surplus of water in the reservoir.

The men reached for their pocketbooks, and put the cash on the line.

When it was counted, a total of $655.00 was in the treasury.

The group was serious over a serious matter, and put their money up to help fight for continued civic improvement, and a greater water system.

County leaders of the Red Cross Blood Donor program reminded all citizens today that the Asheville Regional unit Bloodmobile will be in Waynesville Monday.

The quota for this visit is 150 pints, according to David Underwood, county chairman. He urges that all people who haven't donated blood previously to do so on this visit. And he also reminded the many people who have given blood to check their card to see whether they are eligible to donate again.

The Bloodmobile will be at the Waynesville Presbyterian Church from eleven in the morning until five in the afternoon. All civic organizations are sponsoring the visit.

Friday Last Day To Get Name On Books For Town Water Bond Election

All voters in the Town of Waynesville were reminded today, that Friday is the last day to register for the water bond election. The bond election will be held on Saturday, November 8th.

All persons who have voted in a town election in the past two years do not have to register. Those who live within the town, and have not registered, have until six o'clock Friday to do so.

The poll books are open at the city hall for those voters in this area, and for those living in Allens Creek, the books are at the school, with Mrs. Denton Brown, registrar.

This registration is not to be confused with the county poll books, which are at four precincts within the town.
