Coyotes Move From Plains To Eastern Tobacco Land

By HERB ALTSCHULL
(For Jane Eads)

WASHINGTON—The lone prairie, where the coyotes howl and . . . Bosh, says the National Geographic Society—Them Coyotes is, a-howling just as loud in the grape country of upstate New York and the tobacco lands of North Carolina.

Time was, Society, researchers note, when the coyote never strayed from his home on the range, but he's been doing some fancy traveling of late—mostly in automobiles. Now you'll find him anywhere from Maine to Florida. Tourists should be blamed, or praised, depending on whether the coyote is a friend of yours.

It seems that tribes of eastern tenderfeet roaming the prairie lands in their convertibles took a liking to coyote cubs they found along the way. The playful, fox-like little beasts seemed so cute they decided to take them home for pets. Everybody thought that was a fine idea, even the cubs.

Unfortunately, the cubs grew up into big coyotes and heard the call of the wild. This longing for the footloose life led many of them to escape from their owners. Others got so cantankerous the owners were glad to turn them loose.

So the coyotes took to prowling the woods and mountains of the East. They thrived on that kind of life, and many of them mated with dogs, creating the strange, clever half-breeds that feast on the flocks and herds of eastern farmers.

Audience Inventory

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP)—Manager William H. Mortensen of the Bushnell Memorial Auditorium here told a Connecticut legislative committee considering a bill affecting places of amusement that the auditorium has accommodated six to seven million people in its history and has had to eject only five of them.

"Two were drunk," he said, "two were disorderly, and one was dead."

In 1948, use of DDT practically eliminated malaria in Sicily where it had been a scourge for centuries.

Town Has Ship's Time

WELLELEET, Mass. (AP)—The first thought of a summer visitor at Wellfleet, on Cape Cod, when he hears the First Congregational Church clock strike this year may be that the clock is out of order.

At 2 p.m., for instance, the clock strikes four. Which is just what the townsfolk of Wellfleet want it to strike at that hour.

For the people of Wellfleet voted to install a clock which would strike ship's time. Using ship's time, the Wellfleet clock divides the day into six four-hour watches and the bell, sounding at half-hour intervals, shows the progress of each watch. Thus, it will strike one at 12:30 a.m., at 4:30 a.m., at 8:30 a.m., 12:30 p.m., etc. A half hour after these times, two strokes are sounded. Finally, the sounding of eight bells indicates that it is either 4 a.m., 8 a.m., 12 noon, 4 p.m., 8 p.m., or midnight.

Parakeet Advice

WACO (AP)—Want to know how to catch a parakeet that's flown the cage? Spray him with the garden hose. This wets the bird's wings so he can't fly. The advice is from Parakeet Raiser Mrs. F. D. Billingsley of Waco.
