Keep Picnic Foods Cold, Public Health Advises

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Many cases of food poisoning and food infection — some fatal — hit the headlines during the summer, often as the aftermath of picnics.

Outbreaks frequently strike without warning because the food shows no signs of spoilage. Cream-filled pastries and pork products, such as mild-cured ham, have most often caused such illness. Bacteriologists at the U. S. Department of Agriculture caution that soft protein foods, especially those which are handled in preparation, are especially subject to rapid and dangerous spoilage in warm weather and may be harmful even when they have no spoiled odor, taste or change in appearance.

In all seasons, the experts emphasize, such foods as soft custards, cream puffs or cream filling in pie or cake, cooked salad dressings, gelatin mixture, stuffed eggs or egg salads and all cooked meats, poultry and fish must be kept safely cold until they are served. They cannot stand and wait out on the table in a warm kitchen any more than they can in picnic baskets.

For outdoor summertime eating it is smart to keep such foods in insulated containers, or in closed jars or kettles packed in a box or tub of cracked ice and insulated with heavy newspaper wrapping. Food specialists suggest that instead of filling sandwiches with meat or egg mixtures you take along plain buttered bread or rolls, with the filling in cold containers, and fix the sandwiches when you're ready to eat.

The U. S. Public Health Service Milk and Food Branch says the basic trouble from food outbreaks over the years can be attributed principally to contamination during preparation or to inadequate refrigeration or improper storage. Its experts recommend the following protective measures:

1. Cook all foods thoroughly.
2. Keep all food not served immediately under refrigeration.
3. Avoid cakes and pies with cream filling during the hot weather unless kept under refrigeration.
4. Make sure of the cleanliness of all persons who prepare food as well as of all utensils.
5. Protect stored foods against rodents, mice and insects. The difference between food poisoning and food infection is: Food poisoning is the result of toxins already developed by bacteria in things you eat. Reactions such as fever, nausea and vomiting come as soon as 30 minutes after eating. Food infection is the result of eating food contaminated with certain type of organisms like salmonella bacteria, which develop toxins after you eat it.

The cost of a single item of livestock feed, in many areas, represents nearly one-half the total cost of dairy farm operations.
