

How Yanks Began Big Win

NEW YORK — It was the last Saturday of the 1949 baseball season. The Yankees, hobbled by countless aches and bruises, were one game off the American League lead with only two games to play against the first place Boston Red Sox.

Many columnists had deserted Yankee Stadium. For want of what they felt would be a more exciting event, they traveled to Belmont Park and saw Guiltoline win the $112,285 Futurity. They didn't believe the Yankees had a chance, especially since Boston Manager Joe McCarthy was tossing his 25-game ace, Mel Parnell, at Casey Stengel's battered crew.

Yet, there were 69,551 fans in the stadium, including 700 who came down from New Haven by rail on the Joe DiMaggio Special to honor the Yankee clutch player. It was Joe DiMaggio Day.

The Yankees had to win this one to stay in the running. A Red Sox win meant the pennant.

The Red Sox scored a run in the first inning off Allie Reynolds and in the third Yankee fans began to moan when the Sox tallied three more runs on just one puny single and five walks. Reynolds had given up three of the walks and relief specialist Joe Page had yielded two more to force home the second and third runs of the inning. Thus, the Red Sox led, 4-0.

Yanks Scored Two
In the bottom of the fourth the Yankees bounded back with two runs on three solid hits. Fittingly, Joe DiMaggio, who had been out 43 days due to a virus infection, launched the attack with a line drive that bounded into the right field stands for a ground-rule double. After Bill Johnson fanned, Hank Bauer singled, scoring DiMaggio. Johnny Lindell singled and Bauer made third. Bauer counted when Gerry Coleman flied to Dom DiMaggio in center.

In the fifth, Parnell frittered away the rest of his lead. Phil Rizzuto began with a single to center. Tommy Henrich singled over second and when Yogi Berra singled to center, Rizzuto scored and McCarthy called on Joe Dobson to quell the Yankee uprising. But Joe DiMaggio hit a smash that carried off Dobson's glove for the Yankees' fourth straight hit and fourth run to tie the score.

In the next two frames the deadlock remained. But in the last of the eighth, left fielder Johnny Lindell came to the plate with two out. Lindell, wallowing in a season-

The art of "scrambling"—pitching and chipping for one putt when the green is missed—is well developed by all the top golfers.

It is virtually impossible for one to play all four rounds of a big tournament with perfect shotmaking. On at least one round the player's touch will not be "on" and he will have to make "saves" time and time again.

If his short game is good, his long slump with a meager .229 batting mark, drove one of Dobson's fast balls into the left field stands to make the score 5-4. It was only Lindell's sixth homer of the season but it was a big one.

He was the Yankees' big hero along with Page who had allowed but one hit in the last six and two-thirds innings to achieve his 13th victory of the campaign, plus a Yankee tie for the lead.

The following day 68,055 fans turned out to see the final game of the season. Vic Raschi racked up his 21st victory, 5-3, in pitching a five-hitter.

While this game gave Stengel his first of four straight championships, it was the Lindell home run game on Joe DiMaggio Day that left the fans gasping.

total for that day will not reflect many of his misplays. Invariably the good chipper and pitch player is a consistent scorer.

Probably the most common error in playing the short shots, within 100 yards of the hole, is that of uncorking the wrists early in the return stroke. The stars never let the clubhead catch up with the hands. Even at the completion of the downswing the clubhead lags.

Dubbers frequently "flip" the clubhead. This results in the "fat" or "chucked" shot in which the clubhead passes completely under the ball or hits the turf and never reaches the ball. These shots sometimes result in topping the ball.

Body, arms, hands—everything—should precede the clubhead on the through stroke.

Bloodmobile To Be In Canton Wednesday

Canton will have a visit from the Red Cross Bloodmobile Wednesday, August 5. Sponsored by the Canton Y's Men members, goal of the Unit this trip is between 150 and 200 pints of blood.

Need for life-saving blood was brought home to Canton people recently when Mrs. Woody Lipham, wife of the supervisor of Champion's Machine Tabulating Section, was seriously ill and needed seven pints of the precious plasma. She received it — and without charge. Blood is also badly needed for wounded veterans of the Korean fighting and for the manufacture of gamma globulin, only known preventive to polio.

Tony Jones, president of the Y Men's Club, will supervise the bloodmobile's stay at the YMCA Wednesday.
