New Machine Aids T - Quarterbacks

LAST SEASON.

AP Newsfeaures

BROWNWOOD, Tex. - A mechanical T-team center is one of the latest gadgets in football training equipment. Its inventor, Felton Wright, veteran of Texas coaching, says it's going like hot cakes.

It will be used in many backfield drills and forward pass workouts this spring. It already has demonstrated its usefulness in eliminating fumbles.

The mechanical center is a 3legged contraption with a 2-pronged cradle. Above the cradle is a rubber-covered metal bar. This is a trigger which when touched much as the quarterback presses on the seat of the center's pants preparatory to the snapback-pops the ball into the quarterback's hands.

Among the colleges ordering the machine are Tulsa, Howard Payne. McMurray, Abilene Christian and West Texas State. Many high schools are incorporating in their training plans.

THREE-LEGGED T CENTER-Inventor Felton Wright only has to pull the lever to have a football pass to his son, Bob, who plays the part of a T-formation quarterback. The machine helps quarterbacks become accustomed to handling the "snap back".
