Currier & Ives Exhibit Features Appealing Prints

Twenty-two well-known sketches by Currier and Ives, "Printmakers to the American People," are featured in an exhibit now on display in the First National Bank.

Some of the outstanding prints are: "The Old Barn Floor," showing a little colored boy dancing to benjo music; "The Farmers Home: Autumn," picturing farmers gathering up yellow apples in an orchard; "High Water in the Mississippi," depicting a flood in "Big Muddy" with the steamer "Stonewall Jackson" in the background; "Camping in the Woods," showing four bearded and mustachioned hunters discussing a fish one has caught, and "The Miller's Home," with a peaceful rural "Down by the Old Mill Stream," scene.

Other titles include: "Four Seasons of Life: Childhood," "Old Farm Gate," "American Stead: Winter," "The Green Village Streets," "The Fair Triumphant," "Prairie Fires of the West," "Mountain Springs," "Indian Winter Scene," and "Falls."

The display is sponsored by L. N. Davis Insurance Co., the property of the Travelers Insurance Companies.
