EVANGELISM is important for James Leroy Pritchard, 12, of Oklahoma City. Five years ago they were Oklahoma City's forgotten children. Today they are leading better lives because a ragged urchin, many years ago, was dragged to Sunday school by a friend. The children are the congregation of the non-denominational Children's Church of America, founded by the former ragged urchin, the Rev. L. M. Stevenson, "bicycle preacher".

Cassell Cites Major Needs Of Haywood County's CDP

Observations and suggestions in connection with his eight months work with the Haywood County Community Development Program were made to The Mountaineer last week by Steve Cassell, former assistant county agent, just before leaving here for Virginia, where he is to work as a consultant with a fertilizer manufacturer.

The biggest present need of the CDP in Haywood County, Mr. Cassell asserted, is a survey of farming and living conditions in the rural areas to be used to set up a program of projects to be undertaken.

Each community should set up a plan of what it hopes to accomplish and then determine steps by which progress can be measured, Mr. Cassell said.

(Surveys have been held during some years in the past, but were not conducted during 1953.)

Failure to draw up a list of goals to be accomplished hurt Haywood communities in competition with other WNC counties in the district CDP contest last fall, he added.

The former county agent pictured the CDP as an "over-all coordinating" agency made up of members of all organizations in the community—including home demonstration clubs, school, church, agricultural, and fraternal groups.

Mr. Cassell opined that each of the various groups might serve the community best by adopting and being responsible for whatever project that particular group is best qualified to carry out.

Such a system, he said, prevents duplication of effort and avoids misunderstandings over which group is to do what.

Mr. Cassell asserted that another major need of the community development program in Haywood County is to adopt more projects which bring funds into the community instead of taking them out. While many worthwhile things have been done by the various communities, he said, most of them have been the sort which requires expenditure of funds.

A step in this direction was taken by West Pigeon CDP last week in setting up a four-point program to increase the community's income from burley tobacco.

Mr. Cassell also recommended:

1. Advanced planning of programs for CDP meetings.

2. Selection of a regular monthly meeting night and adherence to the schedule.

3. Putting CDP first as the "parent" organization or as a rural Chamber of Commerce in the community.

SALT LAKE CITY

I have gone so fast and so furiously that I find myself back in Baltimore and I haven't told you about Salt Lake City, Long Beach and San Bernadino. Really looks impossible to catch up!

At Salt Lake City I watched the TV program as it was produced over KDYL by the Utah University Library under the direction of the librarian, Mr. L. H. Kirkpatrick. Cooperating with the librarian was the college director of Audio-Visual Department and Technical advisors from the studio. It was quite an experience to see the group start about 6:30 p.m. to set up properties for 5 scenes, practice, have a dress rehearsal and finally produce the show at 10 p.m. and have it come out more like a professional show than a lot I've seen. Part of the time I stayed in the control room and watched on Monitor to see how everyone worked together to make the final show as effective as possible. Miss Violet Meyer of the Adult Education Office of the American Library Association in Chicago and I watched it in the studio director's office. "Prospectives" is the name of the program which shows what was happening throughout the world during a certain year in relationship to the history of Utah. The librarian serves as commentator and ties the whole program together bringing in suggestive reading. Before each program listening guides are mailed to 52 groups, who in turn listen to the program and then discuss it at a later time. Telephone polls and tests are being made by Psychology Department to study the results of the programs.

Every place I've been the people have been grand to me, but here I was especially fortunate to be taken under wing by two librarians, (both Mormons). For three days

WINNERS in the annual 4-H Club speaking contest Saturday at the courthouse were Martha Swaim of Canton, who spoke on "Wholesome Recreation," and Neal Kelly of Bethel, who discussed "Fun on the Farm". Both winners will enter the district 4-H contest to be held in Asheville June 29. Other entrants were Leona Davis of Saunook, designated as the girls' alternate and T. L. Francis of Waynesville, designated as the boys' alternate; Marilyn Farley of Clyde, Martha Ann Caldwell of Crabtree, and Katie Lou Boyd of Waynesville. Miss Swaim is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Swaim; Kelly is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. O. Kelly. (Mountaineer Photo).

they gave me an insight into the history and interesting places, so much of which I wouldn't have learned on a regular tourist trip. I heard the Tabernacle Choir give their 1283rd program, toured the grounds and museum on Temple Square, visited the copper mines, tasted the water in the Great Salt Lake, lunched at the Lion House (Home of Brigham Young), toured one of their Welfare Buildings and the city and up to the monument where pioneers looked down in the valley and Brigham Young said "This is the place." Incidentally, one of the librarians is his great granddaughter and I have an idea he would have been proud of the answers I got to my many questions concerning their beliefs and their church activities.

They also introduced me to Dr. Garrett Meyer, Director of the Genealogical Society. As an outgrowth of a religious belief in the Church of the Latter Day Saints one of the largest Genealogy libraries has been developed by those interested. It is fabulous and hard to believe unless you see it. For instance, I saw 80 microfilm readers in one room and 79 were in use and in one vault alone 3 million dollars in microfilms. On Haywood County I found they had Allen's history and copies on microfilm made in 1949 of the Court Minute Books 1809 - 1868, Deeds, 1809 - 1865, Marriages 1852 - 1868, Wills and Inventories 1829 - 1878. None of which are in the Haywood County Public Library. Naturally there were many microfilms and books on North Carolina.

They also made it possible for me to visit the Salt Lake County Library at Midvale, Utah. Here again I envied them their building, particularly their Auditorium and

Be Familiar With Terms When Buying Rainwear

Sometimes the "Sunny South" isn't so sunny. Most sections of North Carolina seem to be falling to the not-so-sunny category with unexpected rains coming and going.

It's a good time now to start thinking in terms of raincoats, galoshes and umbrellas since spring and its April showers aren't far away.

Shopping for new rain apparel can be pretty confusing—particularly if you are not exactly straight as to what some of the terms mean. "Water repellent" and "water proof" are two terms commonly used interchangeably. But Julia McIver, State College extension specialist in textiles and clothing, says these are two entirely different terms and the meaning should be clarified.

"Water repellent" materials are those in which the yarn is coated before it is woven, making the fabric resistant to moisture. Some fabrics are permanently water repellent—others are not. When looking at water repellent garments, read the labels as much as you can about the particular fabric before investing.

"Water proof" is a term referring to coating a fabric to prevent the passage of moisture or air through it. But again, read the labels to see what the characteristics of the fabric are.

The labels also give fiber content, usually the manufacturer's name or trade mark, the color-fastness of the fabric, its resistance to perspiration and shrinkage. Any special finishes will be listed as well as instructions for laundering.

the librarian's office, which was "out of this world". It was large enough for Board or Staff Meetings, and I liked the furniture and the way the room was decorated. Their Bookmobile is the only one in the state of Utah.

I forgot to tell you that the mountains around the city were snow-capped all the time I was there. Can you imagine my surprise to see the weather clear, snow and then thunder and lightning—all in one day?
