The Rev. John I. Kizer of Hazelwood was elected director of Region Nine of the Baptist Training Union in the final session of the annual convention in Spruce Pine Saturday.

Other officers elected were the Rev. Wayne A. Slaton of Spruce Pine, associate director; Mrs. Carl Underwood of Hendersonville, secretary-treasurer; Carry Perry of Asheville, chorister; the Rev. Raymond Gones of Asheville, pianist.

Also Mrs. Sam Knight of Hazelwood, young people's leader; Miss Hannah Drummitt of Hendersonville, intermediate leader; Mrs. G. B. Sproles of Spruce Pine, junior leader; and Mrs. Alvin Robinson of Asheville, nursery leader.

The group voted to hold next year's meeting in Calvary Baptist Church, Asheville.

Ed Story of Asheville won the adult speakers contest and Miss Jean Ray Smith of the Bolen's Creek Baptist Church won the young people's speaking tournament. Miss Jean Buchanan of Bear Creek Gap Church in Spruce Pine was second.

Technicolor Film 'Jivaro' Set In Amazon Jungles

The wild and treacherous jungle of the Amazon country is the setting for Paramount's brand new Technicolor adventure drama, "Jivaro," which is due to open next Thursday at the Park Theatre. An action-loaded film, it stars Fernando Lamas and Rhonda Fleming and co-stars Brian Keith. It contains a cast of such leading players as Lon Chaney, Richard Denning and Marvin Miller.

Produced by William Pine and William Thomas, one of the most successful producing teams in Hollywood history, "Jivaro" was filmed in part in the heart of the Amazon wilds. The results of this location work are reported to include some of the most eye-intriguing jungle scenes ever put on film. But that alone is not what makes "Jivaro" such an unusual picture. The fact of the matter is that this turbulent tale contains, in its exciting framework, a love story even more thrilling than the film's broiling action.

DEATHS

HENRY INFANT

Roger Alan Henry, 11-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl J. Henry of Clyde, died Friday night in a Waynesville hospital after a brief illness.

These Women

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

In case you're one of those shy, socially maladroit ones like me who goes through agonies about what to say after the hostess had made introductions and gone her merry way, I'd like to warn you about a current magazine article called "How to Start a Conversation".

I use the word "warn" advisedly, because the piece suggested four possible conversation-starting gambits, and then gave specific examples of each. And I have tried them.

The article, warming up, explained that conversation, once started, rolls along pretty well under its own steam. And you should be able to launch a topic to roll. Then it gets specific.

1. Make a provocative statement, says the article, because it will force questions. The example it gave was: "There is a hurricane heading this way."
2. Ask a leading question. It will force an answer. Example: "Did you see the parade today?"
3. Express an opinion. It will call for assent or dissent. Example: "People who watch television are dull."
4. Ask for advice on a specific problem. No one can resist. Example: "Can you suggest a color for my room?"

In addition to being shy and socially maladroit, I am a neat, methodical person, and so I worked my way through all four gambits, following directions implicitly.

The first gambit was played at a cocktail party tossed in a big, large-glass office building.

I arrived fairly late, and the party was humming comfortably. Failing to see anyone I knew, I waited until I had been supplied with requisite refreshment, and then approached a group of important-looking people.

"Did you know," I inquired sweetly, "that a hurricane is heading this way?"

Well, the results, while not productive of many questions, were positively amazing. In five minutes I was absolutely alone, not only in the room, but in the building. When I got out on the street, I glimpsed one guest, glass still in hand, diving into a subway entrance.

After that I bided my time and then found myself at a business luncheon, seated between and in front of people I had never met. They all seemed to know each other well and I felt sort of out of things until I asked my leading question: "Did you see the parade today?"

"Why, no," said the gentleman on my right, "what parade?"

That really had me stumped for a moment. "Oh, any parade," I returned. And from that moment I was the center of all attention, and when I left the luncheon, I had a list of 15 names, all psychiatrists, which my new friends had positively insisted I write down, complete with telephone numbers.

Next time I expressed an opinion: "I think people who watch television are dull." I said, sitting back waiting. Everybody agreed enthusiastically and briefly, and went right back to watching an old movie on a 21-inch screen.

I haven't worked out "Can you suggest a color for my room?" yet, because nobody has invited me to any parties. And, if any body does, I promise to stick to my pre-arranged conversation roller: "WHO is that woman over there in the weird hat?" It's never failed to get

'Executive Suite' Offers Great All-Star Cast

What is probably the greatest all-star cast ever to have been assembled for a single motion picture appears on the Strand screen Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, in M-G-M's absorbing "Executive Suite".

The picture's pivotal roles are enacted by William Holden, June Allyson, Barbara Stanwyck, Frederic March, Walter Pidgeon, Shelley Winters, Paul Douglas and Louis Calhern, with Jean Daggar, Nina Foch and young Tim Considine heading the supporting cast.

These are the artists who breathe life into the fascinating, contrasting characters presented in Cameron Hawley's best-seller novel of a big business dynasty and the men and women who become enmeshed in a dramatic web of intrigue and emotional conflict when the president of a giant corporation dies without having named his successor. In the lives of the ten people closest to him, his sudden death brings out a parade of human emotions, including love and hate, loyalty, fear, sorrow, envy, honesty and greed.

There are five vice-presidents available for the executive suite of the Tredway Corporation, all with equal authority. McDonald Walling (William Holden) is the young, sensitive and idealistic head of experiment and design. Loren Shaw (Fredric March), the company's comptroller, insists the heart of a business lies in its profit graph. Fred Alderson (Walter Pidgeon) is the treasurer and senior officer in years. Josiah Dudley (Paul Douglas) is the vice-president in charge of sales. Jesse Grimm (Dean Jagger) is the blunt manufacturing boss.

Each has a different motive for wanting the position of power. Each uses a different approach in the schemes, intrigues, bargains and machinations by which he hopes to gain the necessary plurality of votes. The methods run the gamut from appeals to friendship and loyalty to coercion and blackmail. And along with the candidates are involved such others as Walling's young wife, Mary (June Allyson) whose marriage is endangered by her husband's ambition; the neurotic Julia Tredway

(Barbara Stanwyck), heiress of the company's founder; Eva Bardeman (Shelley Winters), the secretary to whom Dudley turns in the face of his wife's coldness; the conning stockbroker George Caswell (Louis Calhern); and Erica Martin (Nina Foch), the secretary who knows more about the deceased president of the Tredway Corporation than all the others.

Each of the stars in the imposing cast of "Executive Suite" contributes a striking performance, with the sum total affording a galaxy of dramatic talent unequalled in screen annals. This star power is matched in the incisive Ernest Lehman screen play, the dissecting direction of Robert Wise and the brilliant production on the part of John Houseman, who previously impressed with "The Bad and the Beautiful" and "Julius Caesar".

Burrell Family Reunion Set For Sunday, May 23

Quartets and other special music will feature the 10th annual Burrell family reunion scheduled in the Original Church of God in the Phillipsville section of Canton Sunday, May 23.

The program will pay tribute to Mrs. Mary Burrell Mull of Sylva, who will observe her birthday anniversary May 24. Mrs. Noah Burrell Ward of Waynesville, a half-sister of Mrs. Mull, will also be honored.

The program last year attracted more than 300 persons from all sections of the South.

Ellis Burrell of Canton is reunion president, and Mrs. Maude Peek is secretary.

Household Hint

To make a duster which just stir up dust to have it somewhere else, pour 2 cups nitrate polish or liquid wax in clean jar or coffee can. Turn tainer until the inside is completely coated, then pour off excess polish or wax. Fold in a clean soft cloth, place it in can and close cover tightly. This stand 24 to 48 hours before used, dust will adhere to cloth, which won't leave a polish on furniture surface. When cloth becomes soiled, and repeat process.
