Mountain Blooms Are Nearing Peak

The spring color show is rapidly approaching its peak in the Great Smoky Mountains and along the Blue Ridge Parkway in Western North Carolina, Park Rangers say that the showy flame azalea and rhododendron will put on their best color display within the next two weeks.

Mountain laurel is just starting to bloom at some elevations and by this weekend (the 29th) there will be a prominent display along the Parkway. About May 28th, the laurel in this area should be at its peak. Higher in the Craggies the peak should be reached about the first week of June.

Silver Bell and fire cherry can still be seen in many areas. The fire cherry tree is now putting on a showy and provocative display.

For pure color display and spectacular viewing, the purple rhododendron, spreading out over 600 acres of the Craggies, puts on the best show for nature lovers and visitors to Western North Carolina. Detergent, Hot Water Roan Mountain has much purple rhododendron also but does not Prevent Gray Laundry grow so profusely as that in Craggy Gardens
