BOB G. FULBRIGHT

Bob G. Fulbright, son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Fulbright of Lake Junaluska, who was graduated Monday from Mars Hill College, has received one of two $100 scholarships awarded to Urban University in South Carolina. He will enter there this fall as a junior.

While at Mars Hill, Bob was an officer in the Spanish Honor Club, associate director of the College Training Union, editor of the training group's publication, "The Digit"; president of the Haywood County Club; and a member of the Philomathian Literary Society.

During his two years, he was on the honor roll each semester and on the Dean's List one semester.

He will begin summer work with the training union department of the Baptist State Convention, June 21.

DETROIT (AP)—The New York Metropolitan Opera House and a burlesque theatre may be at opposite ends of the entertainment world, but Jack Mann manages to jump from one to the other with the speed of a new joke. At the "Met" he is a "comedian," at the burlesque house, a "comic."

Mann has played the role of the jailer, Froesch, in "Die Fledermaus" more than 25 times.

He says there are more similarities than there are differences, although "things enjoyed by burlesque fans would shock the dignified audiences at the Met."

"There isn't too much difference in the routines." But, he says, "you can take your time building up a scene in opera, but your burlesque people want you to get to the point of a joke right now."

Geysers got their name from Iceland's Great Geysir, so named by the Vikings, 1,000 years ago.

Test Camera Before Start Of Your Vacation Trip

A HISTORIC TOUCH for modern camera fans is found in Colonial Williamsburg. A colonial hostess and the town crier pose here for the vacationing Desfor family.

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

A SHUTTERBUG VACATION family toured Washington, D.C. and nearby Colonial Williamsburg. As head of the safari, it was my important job to plan which cameras to take and see that we had enough film. Minor details, like planning and packing enough and the right kind of clothes for five people, were delegated to my beautiful bride.

Gosh, she was lucky! There were light, colorful, summery dresses for the girls which were ideal for the warm weather we hit and the color slides I shot. There were also dungarees and warm stuff for the shift in the weather at the end. But somehow I ran out of film—though I managed to find some in a gift shop and was glad to pay a premium and accept a different type just to keep shooting.

Since we were driving, I was able to take five cameras. My No. 1 camera is a compact, roll film standby of 15 years' service that takes 2 1/4 x 2 1/4 pictures. My second choice is my latest love—a stereo camera that gives me three dimensional color pictures. No. 3 was my daughter's own box-type camera. Then came my movie camera and lastly a press camera to make certain I'd have some pictures for this column.

THE FIRST THREE cameras were kept on the auto seats and were always handy and in constant use. In fact, they got such a good workout that they interfered drastically with the movie record. Taking good movies is a full time job for one person, I discovered again. "Next trip," I kept thinking as I concentrated on the still cameras. "I must teach the bride in advance how to handle the movie camera all by herself. She has some time, besides herding the three youngsters around, to do some of the picture taking."

That usually dependable work-horse, the press camera, chose this trip to become a casualty after a good start. The front shutter jammed while a Williamsburg coach waited till we shifted cameras again. On such an occasion, having a second camera handy proved a blessing indeed.

From previous experience and misfortune that has fallen on friends recently, the cameras and equipment were never left in sight on the car seats when we stopped for refreshments or for parking. In daytime we carried them; at other times they were locked in the trunk to avoid tempting a passing camera collector.

SINCE MANY of the nation's camera fans are—or should be—planning their summer vacations along about now, let's not be too subtle about the points I tried to make. For emphasis they are:

Have your camera and equipment in tested, working order. Try out a new, borrowed or unfamiliar camera by actually shooting pictures and see the results before you go away.

If at all possible, have a second camera. Use one for color film, the other for black-and-white. Let the youngsters bring their own cameras.

For best results, a movie camera is a full-time or a one-person job. If home movies are your main interest, concentrate on it.

Take enough of your favorite film with you—then some more. Figure how many rolls you can shoot per day and the number of days away.

For safety, take out trip insurance on your equipment and use sensible precautions in safeguarding your property. In hot weather do not keep a camera in an automobile glove compartment.

Know something about where you're going, or find out when you arrive, so as not to miss the scenic highlights or the region's best picture possibilities.

Vacation trips are generally short and weather is unpredictable so take full advantage of favorable weather whenever you have it, especially at the very start of any stay. The tendency is to "study it now and take it later."

Don't trust to memory—make written notes about the pictures you snap; the date, names of place and people in it and any other pertinent information. Keep the log in a pocket notebook, not in scraps of paper which will get lost.
