If anybody was injured, he calls the hospital. Sometimes he gets in touch with the persons involved in the accident.

Very often he finds that a good picture of the wreck can be had. Out he dashes, loaded with big press camera, lighting equipment and plenty of film. (Press cameras do not use the small, easy-to-handle roll film with which most people are familiar. The film itself is much larger, sometimes as big as 4 by 5 inches, and is loaded one "holder" at a time. The photographer's films very often take up just as much space as the camera.)

After all this gathering of the news, which may take several hours, the reporter is ready to start writing the story. People who don't make their living by writing tend to split toward two extremes. First there are those who ask, "How do you ever get all that done? It takes me two hours just to write a letter." Then there are those who figure that stringing words together is about the same as sowing seeds in a furrow—you ought to be able to write just as fast as you can hit the keys on a typewriter.

The reality is somewhere between the two. If you expect to make a living at writing, you'd better learn to turn out copy a good deal faster than you used to write your annual "thank-you" letter to your Aunt Emma. On the other hand, it takes time to sift through your notes, to decide what is the most interesting or important feature of the story, what you'll use and what you'll skip.

Then you want to write the story in as interesting a way as possible. Some words seem to plod along. They give information, but are just about as exciting as an arithmetic text. You cudgel your mind for words that sing, or words that pack a punch. Sometimes your mind refuses to cooperate, and you can spend all morning working on one feature.

When the pages are finally covered with type, a quick scrutiny of the story follows. Maybe you answered the telephone in the middle of a sentence and wound up with something that doesn't make sense. How about the spelling of names? (Everybody knows that a typewriter can't spell.)

Now comes the time to "slug" the copy with a headline. Will all 25,000 readers find it interesting? or will it be read by only a small group? Is it a matter that vitally affects the whole county? Is it primarily of interest to women? ... to sports fans? If everybody wants to see it, it might go on the front page topped by a "streamer" running all the way across the page. (Actually, decisions on front-page make-up are usually made at the last possible minute before the paper goes to press. What looked like the biggest story at 9 a.m. may be eclipsed by something that happens at 11:30.)

With the size of the type in the headline determined, the reporter now gnashes his teeth and pulls out a few graying hairs in an effort to put the essence of the story in perhaps half a dozen words and to make those words fit the number of spaces in a line. (For instance, "Home Demonstration" is just exactly too long to fit on one line of the type usually used for such club news.)

Meanwhile, if pictures have been made, they are being developed and printed. Will this one look best filling one, two or three columns? The reporter or photographer marks the size on the back of the photo print; he winds another sheet of paper into his typewriter and heads it the same way—3 column cut—for example; and writes a outline to go underneath.

Finally, the reporter gathers up the results of his toil. He heads back to the mechanical department where a dozen hooks await his copy. Headlines are stuck on the one marked "headings". Cutlines

Legion Auxiliary Rummage Sale Set For October 9

The American Legion Auxiliary will hold a rummage sale all day Saturday, October 9, in the building formerly occupied by the James Furniture store on Main Street, Waynesville. Proceeds of the sale will go toward the organization's projects for veterans' families.

Contributions of clothing and other articles will be welcome. Donors may contact Mrs. Raymond Caldwell, president, at GL 6-6806, to have their gifts picked up.

Mrs. Neeson Smith and Mrs. J. T. Russell are co-chairmen of the sale.

Lions Club Plans Family Night Meet Thursday Evening

The Waynesville Lions Club meeting next Thursday will take the form of a "family night" to which members will bring their wives and children. The meeting will be held at Camp Hope.

A covered dish supper is planned for 6:30 p.m., but the recreational facilities of Camp Hope will be available all afternoon to those who can come early.

The program after supper will be under the chairmanship of Clairne Woodard.

Noland-Ferguson Reunion Planned For Gatlinburg

The Noland-Ferguson clan from North Carolina and Tennessee are having their third annual reunion at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Watson in Gatlinburg, Tenn., on Sunday, October 3. All relatives and friends are urged to attend.

Information concerning transportation or place can be secured from J. J. Ferguson, chairman of arrangements.

CAR To Meet Friday At Lake Junaluska

A meeting of the Joseph Howell Society, Children of the American Revolution, will be held in the home of Mrs. Raymond Lane at Lake Junaluska, Friday, October 1, at 3:30 p.m. Mrs. Lane is the new senior president of the Society, succeeding Mrs. L. K. Barber.

Miss Betty Barber, junior president, will preside and the program will be on Vacation Experiences with all members participating. Members are requested to bring clothing for Crossnore.

MAYOR J. H. WAY, right, is shown pouring diamonds in the glass bowl, which also contains little crystals. One of these bowls will be at Ray's Super Market, the other at the Food Store. Every time a person goes to one of the two stores he or she will have an opportunity, without obligation, to pick a stone out of the bowl. This crystal will be put into a little envelope, then sealed. This is then taken to Kurt Gans, Jeweler, where a free inspection will be made, to determine if the customer picked out a crystal or a $100.00 diamond. On the left is Kurt Gans, holding ten mounted diamonds, same size as those in the bowl. In the center is William S. Ray, manager of the two stores participating in the diamond hunt. JayCees Sponsor Free Square Dance Saturday Night

Opening the winter season of Waynesville JayCee square dances, the organization is holding a free dance on Saturday night, October 2. The dance will be held at the Waynesville Armory beginning at 8:30 p.m.

A talent show will be a feature of the program and anybody who can "blow a jug, pick a guitar, scrape a fiddle, do a spot of buck dancing," or offer any form of entertainment is invited to compete for prizes.

Other prizes will be awarded to the best couple in each set, the best man and to the best woman dancer. Door prizes will also be given.

Another highlight of the program will be an exhibition dance in which the prize-winning Bethel Junior dance team has been invited to take part.

The JayCees will be ready to teach the steps of various figures to anyone who may not have square-danced before.

Lester Burgin, Jr., will serve as master of ceremonies, and "Bug" Kuykendall will call. The JayCees are issuing a cordial invitation to everyone to "come in your straw hat and 'overhauls'."
