Women's Influence Grows In 34 Years Of Suffrage

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON — Top women leaders in both Republican and Democratic parties, taking note of the 34th anniversary of woman suffrage, agree that while women have made great strides politically there is much more they can do.

In fact, Miss Bertha Adkins, assistant to the chairman of the Republican National Committee, says "woman's job in making her mark on public affairs and progress in government is never done."

In both the appointive and elective fields of public service, women have made significant strides in their attainment of prominent posts and their influence in policy-making and public opinion, she says.

"That in itself is gratifying to citizens over the nation," she says, "but every year there is a new awareness that much more can be done. There is no fixed goal in any phase of activity—only more and more women in public office, more women exercising their rights as voters, as members of their party, to select and elect candidates, and more women training for leadership in governmental and civic programs."

Mrs. Katie Louchheim, director for women's activities of the Democratic National Committee says that democracy "depends for survival on all of us—on getting out the thought as well as the vote, on sharing the responsibilities as well as the privileges." Mrs. Louchheim recalled that when Woodrow Wilson made his famous plea before Congress for Woman's Suffrage in 1919 he said of women: "Without their counsel we shall be half-wise."

Montana, which enfranchised women as early as 1916, sent the first woman to Congress. She was Jeannette Rankin, a Republican. In 1948 there were 11 women on Capitol Hill, and that record was tied in 1952. In the 83rd congress, just closed, 14 women cast their votes—the all-time high. There are 303 women in the state Legislatures, and it is estimated that between 300 and 400 women are seeking election to the 1955 Legislatures. The estimated potential voting population for 1954 is about 100 million, of which the potential women voters will total 51 millions. "The challenge to women to register their ability and their special talents for the noble profession of politics has never been greater than now," Miss Adkins says. "The ideals of public service should have overwhelming appeal to every conscientious woman citizen."

Dr. and Mrs. J. Frank Pate have returned from a week's trip through Virginia and Washington, D. C. En route they visited their sons, Lt. J. Frank Pate, Jr., at Ft. Eustis, Va., and Barry, a first-year student in the Duke University School of Medicine at Durham. They also attended the Duke-Army football game.

CAR Completes October Project

The Joseph Howell Society, Children of the American Revolution, has completed its October project of sending clothing to Crossnore School.

Two large boxes of used clothing have been sent to the school, according to Mrs. Raymond Lane, senior president of the CAR. The clothing is distributed to children in the school when size is satisfactory and the remaining garments are placed in the school's second hand store where they are sold to people in the community. Funds raised through the store are in turn used in support of the school.

Crossnore School, an approved DAR institution, is operated by Dr. Mary Martin Sloop, who was named Woman of the Year of 1952.

Mrs. Lane said that the second hand clothing store averages $200 a day for the school.
