The Sports Club's aim will be to further athletic competition among the children of pre-high school age whose education in that line has been lacking without proper facilities and a place to work with the children.

The club hopes many followers are smitten with "Baby Mountaineer" football fever and come to the stadium for regular treatments as the little team carries the "pigskin slipper" around to prepare for the day their feet will fit some shoes left idle by some "greats of the gridiron".

Sincerely,
Mrs. Myra Harrell

don't DO that!

DOWN, BOY! ... Don't let your dog romp at will among your guests. Some people don't enjoy being pawed by a frolicsome canine.

Australian Women Hold Balance Of Voting Power

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON — In Australia you can't win without the women's vote, Sir Percy Spender, the Australian ambassador, told embassy tea guests recently. The guests, members of the Capital Division of the Women's National Farm and Garden Assn., assured Sir Percy the same holds true in this country, where women make up 51 million of the estimated potential voting population of 100 millions for 1954.

"A candidate doesn't have a chance for election unless he has the women on his side in my country," said the diplomat from "down under". In addition to outnumbering the men, Sir Percy said the women in Australia are better organized. "Furthermore," he added, "the most intelligent political questions come from women."

An Indian woman delegate to the United Nations' Commission on the Status of Women was asked what is the greatest problem women face. She came up with a one-word answer: "Men."

Rachel Mason of the Department of State, advisor to the U. S. delegation to the commission, believes that in some countries where women do not have the vote they do suffer inequalities. She says the commission, which is studying what she describes as a proposal for a "family law" all over the world, is working toward the extension of educational opportunities and equal pay for women.

In this country, she points out that since 1926 women have been able to vote on the same basis as men and that the U. S. Civil Service, for instance, operates on an "equal pay for women" basis.

Mrs. Mason said that some women from foreign countries, however, seem to think American women may be sacrificing their femininity and pleasure in their own families by adventuring into political and public life. "Most seem to feel, though, that American women by taking an active part in local organizations or politics are extending not only their own horizons but their families' too," she added.

Topmost project in the General Federation of Women's Clubs citizenship program this year is getting its members to go to the polls 100% in November, with the stress on good government and good candidates in pre-election programs.

"We used to be non-partisan," Mrs. Theodore S. Chapman, president, said, "Now we are bi-partisan. You can't be a good American citizen and be a member of a party. Also you can't be a good citizen and not vote."
