Roosevelt approached the barricade her hands on the top plank and vaulted it. None of us was able to follow her example. We scrambled over as best we could.

Mrs. Roosevelt was the first and only President's wife to hold regular conferences with women members of the press. We'd gather in the Green Room on the first floor of the Executive Mansion until an usher escorted us upstairs to the Monroe Cabinet Room, Mrs. Roosevelt would answer a wide range of questions about topics ranging from family and personal affairs to world problems. We always had much more than enough to write about when we left,

The first time I saw Mrs. Roosevelt was at an Easter Monday eggrolling party on the White House lawn when she stood smiling and obviously enjoying herself in the midst of a milling mob of young-
