Observe Thanksgiving With 'Thanksgiving,' Pastor Says

"True Thanksgiving best expresses itself in daily 'thanksgiving,'" the Rev. J. C. Goodwin, pastor of the Clyde Baptist Church, told the Waynesville Kiwanis Club last night at a meeting at Spaldon's.

"Thanksgiving should be a natural quality within us, and we should be searching constantly for the source of that which we are," he added.

Describing Thanksgiving Day as more of an American institution than any of our other holidays, Rev. Goodwin urged his audience to give thanks each day for the many blessings "We are prone to take for granted."

He asserted that Americans should be thankful for spiritual as well as material benefits and be grateful for such things as having enough to eat, working at gainful employment, for home and families, and for religious freedom.

"All that we have come to as gifts from Our Father," the minister said, adding, "How much we have to be thankful for in comparison to those Americans who celebrated the first Thanksgiving in 1621."

"Is it natural for only one day in the year to be called Thanksgiving?" he asked.

"Let us live and give thanks every day of the year."

Rev. Goodwin was introduced by Roger Ammons, who was in charge of the program. Kiwanis President Hye Sheptowitch presided at the meeting.
