If your waffles stick it may be because you have allowed your waffle iron to become overheated, because you have cooled the iron with the grids closed, or because you have started to bake the waffles before the iron was at the correct temperature.

How To Whiten Your Discolored Nylon Garments

By RUTH CURRENT, State Home Demonstration Agent

HERE IS CHEMISTRY IN THE HOME — A new method for whitening discolored nylon garments. Have your white nylon garments become so discolored that ordinary washing and bleaching will not restore their whiteness? If so, we suggest a method which should make them look fresh and white. It is important to follow the steps in the order given — many garments may not need all the steps for satisfactory results.

1. Wash garments thoroughly with soap or synthetic detergent by hand or in a washing machine, depending on the construction and type of garment.

2. Into approximately one gallon of hot water (160 degrees) in an enamel container add one package of "color remover" and immediately add wet garments. Stir gently while maintaining temperature. If after 30 minutes whiteness is restored evenly, remove garments and rinse thoroughly in hot water. If whiteness was not restored, leave in 30 additional minutes. Temperatures in excess of 160 degrees may set wrinkles that are difficult to remove by ironing.

3. Into approximately one gallon of warm water add two tablespoons of "Clorox" and two tablespoons of a detergent. Immerse garments and with occasional stirring let soak for 30 minutes. Rinse thoroughly in warm water.

4. For final rinse, immerse garment in approximately one gallon of warm water containing a tablespoonful of an optional whitener.

Drip dry and iron with a steam iron or a dry iron at "rayon" setting.

Any precautions supplied by the manufacturer of any product used should be followed.

It Takes More Than Money To Be A Washington Hostess

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON—It takes more than dough to be a top hostess in this town. Many an ambitious woman has thrown the crisp green around—even thrown in a family tree—and failed to make the grade.

Capitalites—and some rather reluctantly, I might add—still concede Perle Mesta is the "hostess with the mostest," and she probably spends less money on her wing-dings than most, although she is a very wealthy woman in her own right. She's no femme fatale. She's not beautiful. She's no fashion plate. She's not bizarre, or even original, nor is she a great conversationalist. The food and drink she serves, although good, are not spectacular.

Yet people like to be invited to her parties and always go and have a good time. Even Elsa Maxwell, a party-thrower with an international reputation, purred with pleasure at one of Perle's big holiday shindigs, though she made some rather catty remarks about our hostess in her recently published book.

Perle's parties this season are being staged in the luxury apartment hotel where she is living with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. George Tyson, until the mansion she purchased is ready for occupancy.

One of Perle's biggest parties this season was for the retiring French Ambassador and Mrs. Henri Bonnet. She also gave a cocktail party and tea for the retiring Italian Ambassador and Mrs. Tarchiani, who have been here since 1945. At the Bonnet party she also honored the new Greek Ambassador and Mrs. George Malas, long-time friends of Greek-born Helle Bonnet.

The hostess' sister, who raises poodles at a kennel at Charlottesville, Va., gave Mrs. Bonnet one of her prize miniatures to replace her recently departed black "Luli," which used to wear a winged collar and white tie at embassy parties. At this party she served dinner with wines, including 10 cases of fine champagne. A French singer entertained, and Perle imported a professional poodle act for the amusement of her 150 top-ranking guests, all headline names in the capital's diplomatic, official and social circles.

At the Tarchiani party an equally brilliant guest roster heard Italian folk songs and filled plates with delicacies from a table centered with an ice carving of the Cristoforo Colombo, the ship that carried the Tarchianis home.
