izing the State Highway Commission to pay for the cost of a viaduct through Canton came out of a House committee Wednesday and in all probability will be on the calendar today or Friday. Rep. Rogers said the committee report was favorable, and he predicted the bill would have smooth sailing on the floor of the House.

"The proposed tobacco tax is dead," Rep. Rogers said. The proposal was to put a tax of two cents a package on cigarettes in order to raise about $8,500,000. Eastern Carolina farmers have been fighting the measure continuously ever since it was proposed by Governor Hodges in January.

"We are hearing a lot right now about increasing the sales tax from three per cent to three-and-a-third or to three-and-a-half per cent," Rep. Rogers said this morning.

Last night Rep. Rogers, together with Secretary of State Thad Eure appeared in WUNC-TV with a program designed to create interest in the Ramp Convention Sunday. "The program went over big, and Raleigh has about 30 bushels of ramps. There are 20 bushels at the S & W Cafeteria, which they plan to feature on their menu today and Friday."

17, of Canton, and James A. Kirkpatrick, 17, of Waynesville were both examined at the hospital here and then released.

According to Cpl Smith, Sorrells related that Miss Putnam had urged Leatherwood to slow down as the car approached Clyde, but said the latter paid no heed to her request.

Patrolman V. E. Bryson said that he was on the old highway near the western town limits of Canton when he observed a 1949 Chevrolet convertible heading toward Clyde at a high rate of speed.

He attempted to locate the car, but the Clyde collision took place before he arrived in the town.

According to a report, Mr. Gidney went to Clyde to see Dr. A. C. Downs, optometrist, about getting new glasses.

Leatherwood's car caught fire after the collision. Clyde firemen responded to an alarm and extinguished the blaze. The car was owned by the youth's mother, Mrs. Carrie Cunningham.

Leatherwood will be given a hearing before Police Judge Larry Cagle at Clyde after he is released from the hospital.

Funeral services for Gidney will be held at 4 p.m. Thursday in the First Methodist Church in Canton. The Rev. I. L. Roberts will officiate, and burial will be in Bon-A-Venture Cemetery.

Pallbearers will be Harley Stiles, Barney Anderson, Halmond Cook, Carroll Warren, Edward Pless and Woodrow Robertson.

Honorary pallbearers will be members of the Men's Sunday School Class of the First Methodist Church. Flower bearers will be members of the church's Woman's Society of Christian Service.

The body will lie in state an hour prior to the services. It was taken to the home Wednesday afternoon.

Surviving are the wife, Mrs. Margaret Davis Gidney; three daughters, Mrs. Dorothy June Wells of Canton, Mrs. Frances Hannah of Raleigh, and Miss Margaret Ann Gidney of Canton; a son, Charles, Jr., of Canton; the mother, Mrs. W. L. Gidney of Asheville; two sisters, Mrs. A. B. Ensey of Asheville, and Mrs. Harry Steele of Washington, D. C.; two brothers, Dewey of Asheville, and L. H. of Johnson City, Tenn.; two grandchildren; and a number of nieces and nephews.

Cpl. Smith said Gidney's death was the first in Haywood County from a traffic accident since last August.

to present a 15-minute program on the convention over WUNC-TV, seen by some 500,000 television viewers Wednesday night. The studio audience also got five bushels of the highland herbs.

On the TV program were Bill Palmer, president of the North Carolina Friends of the Ramp Society; Rep. Jerry Rogers of Hazelwood, Mr. Eure, and Miss Marian Rabb of the State News Bureau, and Glenn Baker of Canton.

Folks in Piedmont and Eastern Carolina also will meet Haywood County's ramps when they visit the S. & W. in Raleigh where 25 bushels of the olfactory bombshells are being featured on the menu.

The menu as planned for the banquet includes: roast beef, mashed potatoes, gravy, broccoli, tossed salad, rolls, relishes, French orange cake, coffee, tea, or iced tea.

The meal is being prepared and will be served under the direction of Mrs. Rufus Slier and the school cafeteria staff.
