

Inning Beacon Run Back Hazelwood, 5-4

Finished nine innings here Saturday night, but a lone run in the bottom of the ninth brought the underdogs a 5-4 victory.

13 hits off Hazelwood pitcher Cagle, while the visitors scored 10 safeties off two pitchers.

Bishop, Babe Miller got two hits and Johnson, with four trips to the plate, led the hitters.

Western North Carolina League games Saturday night were opened by Marshall Ecker edged Ecusta 3-2.

Hazelwood will meet the locals here Saturday night in a game which will be the final of the season.

Schmeling Got Break, Won Title On Foul

WINS GOING AWAY—As his manager, Joe Jacobs, argued with referee Jim Crowley, Max Schmeling (being carried to his corner) became the world's heavyweight boxing champion. This dramatic finish happened 25 years ago (June 12, 1930) in Yankee Stadium when Jack Sharkey landed a low blow in 2:55 of the fourth round.

AP Newsfeatures Sports Editor

On a warm June night 25 years ago 79,222 boxing fans jammed Yankee Stadium to see Jack Sharkey of Boston and Max Schmeling of Germany fight for the world's heavyweight boxing championship.

At the time it was the largest gathering to attend a fight in the home of the New York Yankees. With ringside seats at $25 the well ballyhooed meeting drew $749,825 in gate receipts, fifth best despite the stock market crash of eight months previous.

Schmeling, regarded as a likeness of Jack Dempsey, had won his last seven bouts. So had Sharkey, the ex-sailor. But Schmeling hadn't fought in a year and for that reason Sharkey entered the ring an 8 to 5 favorite.

Rumors that Schmeling wouldn't receive a fair shake because he was fighting in America were unfounded. These led to a prefight statement by James A. Farley, later postmaster general and Democratic national chairman. New York State Athletic Commission chairman Farley said:

"Fair play will be stressed and Schmeling will receive the same honest consideration as Sharkey."

Farley couldn't have spoken any truer words for the Teuton Schlager, as Schmeling was labeled, surely got a fair shake. He became world's heavyweight champion while being carried to his corner at the end of the fourth round.

Officially the end of the fight came dramatically after 2 minutes and 55 seconds of the fourth round when Sharkey, while leading on points, drove a low left hook below the belt.

The blow was consciously low to those in a position to see it land. It sent Schmeling sprawling to the canvas. Yet confusion reigned because Referee Jim Crowley was not in a position to see the illegal punch.

Crowley went over to Judge Harold Barnes and received an affirmative head shake. He then went across the ring to confer with Judge Charles Mathison but the latter gave no indication as to where the blow landed. Crowley then asked Barnes three more times about the punch and each time Barnes nodded an emphatic yes.

While Schmeling's handlers, Trainer Max Mathon and Doc Casey, carried the European champion to his corner Referee Crowley finally agreed with Barnes. The referee then summoned into the ring the one man permitted to announce the decision—Announcer Joe Humphries.

It was the first time the prized boxing plum went to Europe. It was also the first time in modern ring history that the heavyweight crown was decided on a foul.

When it was over, Sharkey was too overcome to say a word.

Dr. William H. Walker examined Schmeling and he found definite evidence of a low blow.

In his dressing room Schmeling said:

"I'm sorry I won the way I did." It may never happen that way again. Today a low blow means the loss of the round and not the fight.

Imperfect Bond

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP)—Woodrow Griffin walked into the county jail and plunked down $100 in cash to bail out two friends who had been arrested for vagrancy.

As Griffin started to take his friends away from the jail in his car, a deputy asked to see his driver's license. He didn't have it. It had been revoked for driving while intoxicated.

While his friends continued on their way, Griffin was put in jail, where he spent the night because he didn't have enough money left to make his own bail.

Drawings based on Cornell University laboratory tests showing how safety belts prevent injuries.

All these things have been tested exhaustively by the Cornell Aeronautical Laboratory, an affiliate of Cornell University. And the safety belts have been unqualifiedly endorsed by a group of surgeons who participated recently in a panel discussion of the car safety problem.

Heads Bashed
The majority of passenger fatalities are a result of head blows.

In a front end collision the driver will invariably receive a potentially injurious blow to the torso against the steering wheel; where the rate of deceleration is beyond a certain point the driver, if not immobilized on the steering wheel seat, will also receive a head blow against the inner windshield or windshield molding.

For the adult in the front seat, the head initially strikes the inner windshield molding region, followed by a secondary head blow, usually glancing against the windshield and a facial blow on the inner instrument panel shelf.

Nothing like facts the Cornell Laboratory reported:

"Rear seat occupants frequently avoid in in the rear compartment, although automobile records disclosed they had traversed the length of the compartment—rear to front and then back again."

Out of the facts that come from the function of automotive interiors, and because acceptance of seat belts on a wide scale may be slow in coming, the researchers are exploring other methods of body restraint.

Among these other methods are such things as roll-over protection, which have and crucial seat design, to be added, however, that these devices, providing major reduction of the vehicle itself, are restricted to the car of the future.

The record for most home runs in the majors during one month was made by Rudy York of the Detroit Tigers. In 1937 he hit 18 in August.

The last scheduled 20-round heavyweight championship fight was held on March 21, 1941 between Joe Louis and Abe Simon. Louis knocked out Simon in 13 rounds.

New York Visitor Injured While Feeding Park Bear

For disregarding the signs and warnings of the National Park Service against feeding and molesting the bears in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, a visitor from New York was seriously injured. The visitor was feeding a mother bear as he sat in his car and very soon the bear was so attracted to the food that the bear climbed onto the ledge of the car window. The visitor then became aware that the bear was not tame, but it was too late to obey the signs. The bear slapped the man on the right side of the face, which caused severe lacerations and perhaps permanent injury. He was treated by a Gatlinburg doctor.

The National Park Service urges visitors not to feed the bears in the park—not only is it a violation punishable by a fine, but it is dangerous to the visitor doing the feeding and will cause the bear to be a greater menace to others.
