The ordinance barring the youngsters from the lake was adopted when the city fathers discovered the small fry had been shouldered away from vantage points around the small body of water.

'Goals Of Life' Pointed Out To College Students At Junaluska Conference

Three "goals of life" were lined by a Boston University professor for nearly 400 college students and Methodist counselors attending an eight-day leadership conference at Lake Junaluska.

"You come to college dreams and you should come with ideals, a plan for action," Peter Bertocci, professor of sociology at the Boston school, the group. He is the daily form speaker on the conference theme: "The Christian Alternatives to Aimlessness."

He said three things are fundamental to live effectively: a job to do, have someone to love and have something to stand for. Dr. Bertocci advised the group that "if you are not in our kind of world, then have not begun to live maturely; you must learn to grow or come neurotic."
