Sweaters Continue First On Every Girl's List

First on the list of every back-to-school shopper is a supply of sweaters. No college girl ever had too many of these casual, versatile garments, it seems. And the same is true of the grade school and high school set.

This year the variety of sweater styles and yarns is almost endless. But the classic cardigan remains a top favorite, and probably the biggest selling item in this category is the orlon sweater. This is because it has the look and feel of expensive cashmere, yet is budget priced and can be washed as easily as a pair of stockings.

One of the top campus styles of the year is the dyed-to-match sweater and tweed skirt. The sweater half of the combination is available in cashmere, orlon or wool, in slip-on, cardigan or twin sweater sets.

Also important in the 1955 sweater lineup is the bulky ribbed-knit sweater in coat or pullover style, often with wide, loose turtle neck, Italian fashion. These come in dark or vivid hues as well as white, and are particularly beloved for wear with Bermuda shorts.

For dress-up wear, there are many versions of cashmere or orlon sweaters with wide boat necklines, short or long sleeves, with or without jewel, sequin or embroidery trim. Teamed with a dance skirt, these festive little tops will see a girl through many tea dances and after 5 dates.

Probably the most welcome news of sweaters these days is their easy washability. Many of the wool sweaters have been treated to prevent shrinkage, and all the orlon or orlon-and-wool blends may be washed without worry, dried in a short time.

CAMPUS FAVORITE . . . New orlon cardigan in white or colors, with pennant emblem which may be inscribed with desired school name.

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Col. Lester H. Kyle, retired, thinks this city is the Main Richmond on the map, but he knows there also is a Maine Richmond—in fact 17 states have Richmonds.

A motorist asked him how to find the address shown on an envelope. The colonel explained that it was Richmond, Maine. The stunned visitor turned around and headed north.

Library Notes

Margaret Johnston
County Librarian

It was "a first" last Wednesday and I wish you could have been there too. Really, it was a thrilling experience for the Library sponsored its first program for children in the yard of the Old Ferguson Home—the future home of the Haywood County Public Library. We sat in the yard under the shade of the pretty maple tree and listened to Dr. A. R. Riegg, local veterinarian, talk to us on "care, feeding and training of your puppy." Even with the heavy traffic coming and going on Haywood Street, it never once really interfered or took the interest away from the speaker. He talked of the care and feeding, washing of the dog and the breeds best for children's pets, etc. The children had an opportunity to ask questions and all the grown-ups were amazed at the good questions they asked—in fact, all were thought provoking and showed the keen interest of the children.

I couldn't help but visualize as we sat there many such activities taking place in that beautiful yard. Several such programs could go on at the same time. My vision was more of other programs on nature study, book talks or even a comfortable place to sit and read during the summer. Some of the children were so interested in the home that I took them through and talked to them about where the Children's Room could be.

Since it was a history making event—all of the boys and girls signed their names. I trust it will not be too long before other children and adults too can enjoy the beauty of the yard and a new library there.

Michigan has 52,000 more people moving into it than move out in an average year.

WAYNESVILLE, N. C.

He Loses To Transport

NORWALK, Ohio (AP) — Railroads, cars and boats were hard luck for John R. Hampton, 28. War wasn't kind to him either.

Hampton twice was shot during merchant marine service in World War II. Six years ago, he suffered a broken back while working for the railroad. Four years later, a car he was driving upset and caught fire. He was badly burned. This month a motor boat in which he was riding exploded near Port Clinton.

Death finally came in a collision while he was driving.

The homicide rate in the United States dropped from almost 6 per cent in 1934 to about 2 per cent in 1954.
