WASHINGTON-The other day I came across a pamphlet in the mail which was published by the Bureau of the Budget.

UNDERSTANDABLE

Usually the information that one associates with the Federal Budget is difficult to decipher and virtually defies the wisdom of the sages. I was struck by the fact that this little phamphlet was understandable. Having wrestled with budget items, I wish the Budget Bureau would work out some system whereby the budget itself could be as simple to understand as their phamphlet. When the President sends down his bud-"His biggest value to our team completed 24 of 47 passes for 418 larger than a mail order catalog."

Usually they fall into a pattern of "Cut the budget, but leave our item alone, because we need more, not less."

> Congress has to think of national lion, designed to carry on four big programs to defend our country. That alone is an astronomical amount to begin as a starting point. After all hearings were held and the final vote recorded, the President had a budget of $63.8 billion to run everything with during the fiscal year. That figures, as a percentage of national income about 20 percent. The budget has not been balanced.
