MAKING MOVIES involves a lot of waiting on the part of both stars and extras. Here are drivers of the royal coach, waiting at the "Kissmiskolc" (Lake Junaluska) station for the arrival of the prince, played by British actor Alec Guinness, in "The Swan". (Mountaineer Photo).

One Killed

(Continued from Page 1) way over. Howard Lee Ledbetter, Fletcher, driver of the Coca-Cola truck was not hurt, but the investigating officer said damages to the vehicle appeared to be about $400. Patrolman Dayton said the Coca-Cola truck was making a left turn off the highway when the collision happened as Hooper attempted to pass. Hooper returned home after receiving treatment at the Haywood County Hospital. At 5:30 p.m. Friday a 1950 Ford pickup truck, owned by Amos Jones of Saunook and driven by Elijah R. Barker of Waynesville, ran into an embankment off the left side of Highway 19A-23 near the Pleasant Balsam Baptist Church, according to Highway Patrolman V. E. Bryson. The driver was charged with operating a vehicle with faulty brakes and driving on the wrong side of the road. Damage was estimated at $150. At 10:30 p.m. Saturday a 1954 Chevrolet driven by Joseph Boyd Smathers, Route 2, Canton, and a 1950 Ford driven by Joe Edwin West, 20, Route 3, Waynesville, figured in a collision on a sharp curve on N.C. 110 three miles south of Canton. Patrolman Bryson reported that Smathers was preparing to make a left turn and West was proceeding north when the collision occurred. Neither driver could see the other in time to avert an accident, the patrolman reported. Damage was estimated at $229 to the Smathers car and at $200 to the West car, owned by Homer H. West.

An accident at 1:30 p.m. Sunday on the Upper Fines Creek road involved a 1950 Ford coupe driven by Jack Haynes, 22, of Fines Creek and a 1947 Ford coupe, driven by James Harrison Davis, 61, also of Fines Creek. Patrolman Bryson reported. After the collision, Haynes' car overturned off the highway, but the driver escaped injury. Davis was charged with driving to the left of the center line. Damage was estimated at $300 to the Haynes car and at $70 to the Davis car. One accident investigated by Waynesville police concerned a 1956 Ford driven by M. H. McAulay of Hazelwood and a 1941 Ford driven by Henry Wyatt of Allens Creek. Police said Wyatt pulled out from behind a parked truck into the path of the McAulay car. Damage was estimated at $300 to the 1950 Ford and at $150 to the 1941 Ford. The investigation is continuing. Patrolman Guy Messer of the Waynesville police reported that a 1950 Ford, driven by Hubert H. Robinson, ran into the rear of a 1951 Chevrolet, driven by Ralph D. Jenkins, which had stopped in a line of traffic near Jim's Drive-In on the Balsam Road at 3:40 p.m. Sunday. Robinson was charged with following too closely. Damage was estimated at $250 to the Robinson car and at $100 to the Jenkins car.

Frightening Shirt
TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—Tony Pizzo, unofficial goodwill ambassador for Rbor City, Tampa's Latin Quarter, wasn't his usual gay self at a banquet for visiting Cubans. He explained he had just received the result from the mass X-rays conducted by the tuberculosis association. He was advised to have a thorough medical examination. The next day Tony was all smiles when he showed up to bid the visiting delegation goodbye. When X-rayed, he wore a shirt with an elaborate design in metallic threads. The metal showed up on the plate as a large dark mass in the chest area, but his lungs were perfect.

Nothing Sells Like Newspapers

Farm

(Continued from Page 1) dwindled to about 25 spectators. The plaintiffs, through their lawyers, W. Roy Francis and R. E. Sentelle, dwelled at length on closing the county home, and moving the people from the home to licensed nursing and boarding homes. Judge Moore opened his remarks by mentioning that, "it is unfortunate for me to be caught in Haywood County controversies." He referred to the recent lawsuit involving ownership of the Central Elementary School. The supreme court upheld his decision in the case last month. "There have been good arguments on both sides. The only issue for me to decide is the legal question. The court finds the law says the commissioners have the right to sell the farm, by giving everyone an equal opportunity to bid at public auction, and there is not sufficient evidence that they have abused their discretion," he continued. "The board of commissioners have as part of their duties, to take care of the poor, affirmed, in their discretion. The commissioners have the right to purchase and maintain a farm and home. This is given them under the terms of the General Act of North Carolina. There is no evidence of improper operation. "It is not a question of where poor people shall be placed. This problem is like the consolidation of schools, it is a matter brought about by a transition period. Now that we have old-age assistance, Social Security there is a different feeling towards county homes, and many over the state have been closed," Judge Moore continued. The lawyers for both sides were to write the judgment in the case today and present it to Judge Moore. W. Roy Francis was not in town at noon, and whether the case will be appealed was not learned. Grover Davis, attorney for the defendants, made a motion to dismiss the case, as the hearing began, and repeated it after all the complaints had been read and a number of affidavits presented. Mr. Davis read a lengthy affidavit from Mrs. Sam Queen, superintendent of Public Welfare, in which she cited conditions as found at the county home. Mr. Francis, in an affidavit of Jack and Ula Allison, superintendent and assistant of the county home, denied many of the specific charges. The Allisons were in charge of the home seven years. Francis also entered into the record grand jury reports for a number of years. Among the affidavits he heard included those of: Edwin Fincher, former commissioner; C. E. Kirkpatrick, former register of deeds; J. A. Lowe, former sheriff and commissioner; Asbury Howell, a commissioner for

10 years; Jarvis H. Allison, a commissioner for 25 years, at various times. Henry Gaddy, alderman of Waynesville; Ben Sloan, contractor; C. F. Owen, a school teacher for 40 years; C. C. Francis, former chairman of the board, and also register of deeds; Turner Cathey, former assistant county agent, now principal of the Pennsylvania Avenue School, Canton, and one of the plaintiffs. J. W. Killian, member of the county school board, and former chairman; D. A. Howell, former tax collector; Rufus Siler, business man; N. W. Carver, Jonathans Creek; P. D. Turner, Ratcliffe Cove, and D. D. York, business man and resident of Bethel. Harrison Henson, farmer; Mrs. Lou Singleton, one of the plaintiffs; J. D. Justice, 81-year-old citizen, who suggested an investigation, as he set out in his affidavit statements. Francis also presented petitions which he said were signed by 3,000 taxpayers of the county, opposed to the sale of the 140-acre farm. Davis in his summary of the case, cited two rulings from the State Attorney General's office setting out the board had the right to sell the property under the plan of auction. Davis asked: "Does the county commissioners have the right, under the law, to sell the property?" and, "Are the commissioners acting within the scope of their authority?" "This hearing is not about the inmates of the county home, because the commissioners have provided places for them—places licensed by the state." "The board is concerned with the big cost of operating the county home, which showed a net cost for four years of $37,878," Davis continued. Francis said in his opinion that 85 per cent of the citizens were not favorable to the sale. "The farm will bring, according to estimates, about $100,000 or more, and the citizens should have the right to say whether it be sold or not," he continued. Francis pointed out that "in my opinion, it is a serious mistake to close the county home, and to sell the property, and I have the affidavits to back me up in that view," he argued. The plaintiffs were: J. H. Allison, D. J. Noland, Turner Cathey, Mrs. Lou Singleton, Ernest Rogers, Mrs. Carl Edwards, M. V. Jenkins, and M. H. Caldwell.

Electronic Check
RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — An electronic weighing device is being tested by the Virginia Highway Department and Bureau of Public Roads. It will make it unnecessary for trucks with legal limits to pull off the highway for weighing. But when an overloaded truck crosses the device a red light is flashed at the weighing station and the offending truck will be weighed on regular highway scales.
