

Sun Colors Shine Bright

BELL SILHOUETTE . . . This is the Paris thinks women should look at this winter—one-piece dress with a bell-shaped skirt, in navy-and-white shantung.

THIMBLE JACKET . . . This sheath-and-jacket costume is beige linen with brilliant orange surah polka-dotted cummerbund and jacket lining—the sunup-sundown colors featured for resort wear.

This designer calls her new slim silhouette "free form"—shaped to the body but not skin tight. She shows both sheaths and full-skirted dresses, the latter with bell-shaped skirts, which she tags Temple Bell.

A highlight of the collection is her thimble jacket, a brief affair which takes various forms—single or double breasted or curved bolero style—but is barely waist-length or shorter.

Silk linens and gauzy organzas are used in profusion, and the dress-and-jacket costume is still a favorite.

Secretary Must Have 'Sense', Work Hard

Miss Allie, Secretary to Speaker of the House, says a good secretary must work hard.

When she went to Capitol Hill to meet her congressman, Sam Rayburn.

"I didn't want anything, just to meet him," she said. "I was going back to teach school, but he asked me to come back in October (1919) and work for him."

Miss Clary feels strongly that everyone should meet his congressman.

"I'm always asking people 'Do you know your congressman?'" she explained. "When they say 'They don't care anything about knowing me,' I say, 'It might be to your interest to know them.'"

The amicable and popular Texas lady practices what she preaches. She works hard. She opens mail, answers telephones, meets people, but she enjoys her job thoroughly.

"One of the most interesting phases is meeting the VIPs who come to the Hill," she told me. "I'm just the hired help, but I usually manage to be around when they show up. I met King George and Queen Elizabeth of England, I met the present Queen when she visited this country as princess with the Duke of Edinburgh, and I met Queen Juliana of Holland, to mention a few."

Miss Clary always takes her vacations in the fall, except for last year when she left in April to spend three months in Europe. "When Congress adjourns, it's usually too hot and there are too many people everywhere I want to go," she explained.

Meanwhile, the secretary will stay in the little house she's buying in nearby Falls Church, Va., where she has a garden and where she loves to cook up fine fare—chili, fried chicken, corn bread and such—for her friends.

North Carolina farmers lost just about the same flue-cured tobacco acreage in 1954 that they gained by overplanting.
