Campus Cuffnotes

By JIMMY HEGLAR

The Canton Black Bears defeated Erwin 50 to 6 last Friday night. The Black Bears now have an 8-0 record for the season. This week will be the homecoming game for Canton when they play the Maroons. Lee Edwards is a triple-A school but CHS feels confident of another victory.

Friday morning the Latin Club presented an excellent assembly program, translating the scripture reading and the "Lord's Prayer" into Latin. To entertain, some second-year Latin Club members danced and performed Roman combats.

The most enthusiastic part of the program came when Ashley Neal auctioned off the new mem-

Super Markets Are Common Meeting Place For People In All Walks Of Life Today

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON—Where else in the United States but here are you likely to bump grocery carts or rub elbows while reaching for a chicken or a cauliflower with the wife of the vice-president, the ambassador of Burma or a lady in a sari from India?

Such encounters are everyday occurrences in the capital's supermarkets, where every individual, top hostess and just plain housewife, titled bigwig and laborer breadwinner, is reduced to the common denominator of shopper for food for the family. You're just as apt to see a man in homburg and striped pants as the wife of a government clerk in cotton housedress with several tots in tow; a lady in mink and diamonds, as well as a white-jacketed foreign-speaking cook from an embassy.

Often lasting friendships have their beginnings in lines before the fruit and vegetable weighers or the checking counters. Sometimes you see faces so often you find yourself bowing and speaking when you meet them again some place else in public.

Recently at a big embassy reception I caught the smile and nod of an elegantly dressed woman across the crowded salon. "Who is she?" I kept asking myself uncomfortably. Suddenly shunted forward by the pushing throngs I was face to face with her and she nodded and smiled again. "I'm sorry," I apologized. "I know we've

This Is The LAW

By ROBERT F. LEE
(For The N. C. Bar Association)
FAMILY INJURIES

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Smith, and their son, John, age ten, were riding for pleasure in the family car on the highways of North Carolina. John was at the wheel. While driving at an excessive rate of speed and due solely to the negligence of Joe, the automobile collided with a tree. Mrs. Smith and John were seriously injured. May they recover damages in a legal proceeding from Joe?

Mrs. Smith may recover against her husband in the courts of North Carolina a judgment for the full amount of her personal injuries. John, however, cannot recover anything from his father.

There is a statute in North Carolina which gives to a husband and wife the right to recover against each other damages sustained to their person or property the same as if they were unmarried.

If Joe Smith has the usual type of personal liability insurance while driving an automobile, the insurance company will pay to Mrs. Smith the amount of the judgment obtained against her husband. Very likely an attorney will be able to get a satisfactory settlement from the insurance company without the necessity of a legal proceeding.

Ordinarily a wife would not want to sue her husband for a negligent tort, but things are quite different if she knows the judgment will be paid by an insurance company. In these kinds of court actions the defendant often gives testimony that is favorable to the plaintiff.

John cannot recover anything from his father because in North Carolina, and generally elsewhere throughout the United States, an unemancipated minor child cannot maintain a tort action against his parent for personal injuries. The fact that the parent has an indemnifying insurance policy does not change the rule. The reason is public policy, a policy of seeking to preserve parental authority and family harmony. The courts have said that there would be little parental authority and discipline around the home if the minor child could threaten the father with court proceedings. "A child should not be taught to bite the hand that feeds it."

In many jurisdictions, other than North Carolina, a wife cannot sue her husband for personal injuries on the theory that such suits disturb the domestic tranquility of the home.

Bill Brown is employed by Henry White as a truck driver. While acting within the scope of his employment, Bill Brown negligently injures his minor son, Sam. May Sam Brown recover a judgment against Henry White for personal injuries?

Yes. Sam may recover from Henry White, his father's employer. An employer is responsible for the negligent acts of his employees committed within the scope of his employment. The employer cannot avail himself of the immunity from suit extended to a father.
