

Green Fields Show Off Progress In Conservation

By ROY R. BECK
Soil Conservation Service

The beautiful green landscape of Haywood County has appeared since the leaves fell from our hardwood trees. All shades of green are visible where various kinds of cover crops, pastures and even alfalfa have made excellent growth during the warm fall weather. The beauty of our county this fall is a tribute to the conservation job our landowners are doing.

Unfortunately, here and there we see brown, bare fields left exposed to the winter rains, as well as freezing and thawing by our rapidly changing weather. And throughout our county we see the raw scars left by earth-moving equipment. Red subsoil on road banks has already started spewing with the first freeze. The next rain will carry it down hill to choke up ditches and streams and eventually add more thousands of cubic yards of silt to help fill Lake Junaluska and Walters Reservoir.

If we are going to reduce the load of silt carried by our streams and river, we have to attack at the source of the silt; bare land exposed to rain, freezing and thawing.

One man who is doing just this is Robert Hipps of Thickety Community. Mr. Hipps started by seeding the steeper land on his place to alfalfa. For several years, one or more acres of eroded land have been going into alfalfa so that now about half his steeper crop land is covered with alfalfa. Mr. Hipps hopes to get it all seeded during the next three years. By that time, his new farm pond will be surrounded by alfalfa and pasture. By what better method can a man use his hill land fully, yet protect and improve it?

But this isn't all the conservation you will find on the Hipps place. Last spring, right after a logging road was bulldozed up the side of Hipps mountain boundary, Bill seeded rye grass to keep the road from washing out. He also dug turnout ditches about every 100 feet to keep water from turning the road into a gully. Mr. Hipps plans to turn the flatter areas of cut-over land into pasture and spot plant white pine and yellow poplar on the steeper slopes.

Namesakes

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP)—The distinguished names of Benjamin Franklin and Oliver Wendell Holmes graced the traffic court docket on the same day.

Franklin failed to show up, and Judge James McWhorter ordered a bench warrant issued. Holmes was fined $36 for speeding, operating a car without lights and running through two stop lights.

No Exchange

VISTA, Calif. (AP)—A woman whose home was burglarized twice in two days says she is expecting a third call from the thief.

Mrs. Mary Williams said a camera was stolen the first time the thief entered her home. The following day an electric shaver was taken.

Later Mrs. Williams found a crumpled note on her front porch. "I shall return," the note said.
