exceeded his constitutional power. Many newspapers of that period printed cartoons and editorial caricatures depicting a crowned "King Andy" sitting on a dictator's throne! Furthermore, the Senate, probably with the thought of proving to the world that it was no mere rubber stamp, refused to confirm President Jackson's ad interim appointment of Roger B. Taney as secretary of the treasury. This same Mr. Taney later became Chief Justice Taney of the Supreme Court, in which capacity he wrote that famous document, or infamously, depending on your personal views—the Dred Scott decision.

More than a century ago an unemployed country school teacher dreamed dreams, and partly because one of his dreams proved too realistic President Roosevelt was forced into the perplexing predicament of calling a special session of Congress for November 15, 1937. Another incident, more than a century old but wholly unrelated to the dreaming professor, helped to intensify this dilemma and laid the groundwork for Mr. Roosevelt's allegedly business paralyzing session now in the offing! Also, one President was an official hangman.

What? Who? The answers will appear in my column next week.

New Dairy Movement Underway in Mountains

Small dairy farmers in mountain counties of western North Carolina have already captured a $200,000 annual milk business from other states and plans are underway to greatly expand the industry as fast as pastures, cows, barn and other equipment can be added.

About 1,000 farmers in Blount, Madison, Henderson, Mitchell and Yancey counties sold over $200,000 worth of milk for manufacturing purposes to the Biltmore Dairy Farms near Asheville and E. D. Mitchell manager of the farms, says that facilities will be expanded to take care of all the milk produced by the operating farmers. Milk routes have been established and central gathering points have been located for the convenience of the farmers interested in selling their milk and cream.

The movement is spreading to other counties, both in the mountains and in the nearby foothills. The movement was led by F. F. Farnham, dairy extension specialist of State College, cooperating with the county farm agent. Small demonstration pastures are being established, trenches are being filled, and pure bred bull calves are being cured.

The farmers selling the milk have from two to about 15 cows each and the checks which they receive each two weeks run from about $12 to $75.

Two other of the large milk handling plants located in the southwestern mountain area are also taking milk and cream and this is in addition to the large quantity of Grade "A" milk being produced for the retail trade.

Mr. Farnham says indications are that western North Carolina is now definitely on the way to become a great milk producing section. The lush pastures, lack of wild onions, the cool nights and pure running water available on every farm tend to make dairy farming profitable.

The window box should be at least eight inches deep. A layer of small broken stones over the bottom will facilitate drainage. One or two holes in the bottom will permit surplus water to drain out.

Your Washington and Mine

BY JAMES E. POPE

Washington, Oct. 25.—Visiting the White House and reading the biographies of its former tenants, I am plagued with the conviction that there's nothing new under the glittering sun—not even in the accusations and charges, vituperative and otherwise, brought by New Deal castigators. We need only turn back a few pages of American history when, lo, we have the same political dramas, comedy skits, and the same locale, with claque and hecklers behaving much the same manner they have behaved since the birth of politics. Only the actors and the stage hands are new.

Let us consider the Roosevelt administration and the blushing issues enveloping it in 1937 in comparison with the administrations of the two great patron saints of all Democrats—Thomas Jefferson and Andrew Jackson—and the red-hot issues of their tumultuous times. Roosevelt now is admired, feared or hated for his constitutional or unconstitutional extra-legal short-cuts toward court packing, crop control and wage-hour dictatorship. Epitome of all Roosevelt antagonism of today are the recent utterances of the learned Dr. Glenn Frank, who decried our most valued institutions and "emergency leadership" and voiced his "uneasy sense that some of traditions can no longer be taken for granted." Dr. Frank's words will at least serve as a concise summary of all that which stands for anti-Rooseveltism in 1937.

What would they have said—the able Dr. Frank and all these worshippers at the shrine of Thomas Jefferson—had they lived back in 1803 when President Jefferson saw and seized upon a first rate opportunity for dickering with the war harassed and financially embarrassed Napoleon, and came away after trading him some small pocket change for that vast domain lying west of the Mississippi River known as the Louisiana Purchase—with the "dust bowl" thrown in for good measure?

Neither the President nor Congress had the constitutional authority, express or implied, to purchase this or any other foreign territory. The land was already involved because of war between France and England. President Roosevelt today could not legally purchase all or any part of China or Spain even were he able to acquire both for less than half of what he spent on Tugwelltown. At first it was proposed that President Jefferson put through an amendment to the Constitution which would give him the authority necessary to consummate the Louisiana Purchase, but there came a hurry call to the effect that Napoleon might back down, or that the British would seize the territory.

Jefferson consulted his brain trusters or college sophomores and they advised against delay. The deal was made—in open disregard for any or all constitutional limitations.

So much regarding President Thomas Jefferson's short-cuts and hurdles in overcoming objections and circumventing objections to the "achievement of reasonable objectives," and his technique in tunneling obstacles left by a Constitution which he considered had failed him in his country's need for "emergency leadership." I cite all this merely to afford comparison with President Roosevelt's maneuvers of today.

Now what about Andrew Jackson, that other patron saint of Democracy—in what way did his administration follow after Jefferson's, and how did it serve as a trail-blazer for Mr. Roosevelt and some of his pet or "must" proposals?

President Andrew Jackson's conception of Tories and economic royalists had personification in the directors of the United States Bank. His first objective in political alchemy for bringing the more abundant life to the forgotten man embraced the abolishment of that unholy institution. But Congress, being composed of some early 19th century Lord Macaulays, recalcitrated—whereupon Mr. Jackson ordered the withdrawal of all federal deposits from the bank. This was carried out while Congress was not in session, but when Congress later convened the Senate voted a censure of the President, declaring that he had

Herbs Give Zest To Many Dishes During Winter

Spring is in the kitchen all winter for those fortunate people who have an herb garden in a window box or even in a few flower pots.

Basil, chives, summer savory, sweet majoram, thyme, and parsley are a few of the herbs that can be grown indoors through the winter, said Cornelia C. Morris, extension marketing specialist at State College.

These herbs, she added, will add zest to many a winter dish. Parsley, for example, can be used fresh or dried and its flavor combines well with egg, meat, and vegetable dishes.

The olive-flavored leaves and flowers of basil and the young tender leaves of chives lend a delicate flavor to soups, stews, and salads. Summer savory, often called European mint, is popular for meat and poultry dressings.

Sweet majoram, a native of Mediterranean countries, is much sought by people who come to America from those regions and are fond of the pleasing odor and aromatic taste of this herb in soups, meat pies, and dressings.

Herbs grown in a window box do best in a south window where they can get plenty of sunlight. They should be planted in good soil. A good soil consists of one part well rotted cow manure and three parts good garden loam.

The ideal soil has as its foundation well rotted sods. Add the rotted manure, some sand, and a very small quantity of bone meal. Mix this soil thoroughly and screen out any lumps that may be in it.

Strange Pals of the Animal Kingdom

Picture Parade

Animals, like human beings, often make strange friendships for which there is little explanation. For instance, a cat usually looks upon a rat as a one-course dinner, but Buddy, the kitty shown above, has made quite a pal of a white rodent. Both are owned by Joseph Lentz, of Albany.

Marco, an Australian "honey bear," romps with his friend, Napoleon, his polioe dog. They're in Hollywood.

Nellie was a New York spaniel. She roamed the streets homeless and hungry. Her eight puppies all died shortly after they were born, because the poor thing had been undernourished. But in a home for stray animals Nellie found eight new-born kittens who had lost their mother. She adopted them and they adopted her, proving that there is always an outlet for mother-love.

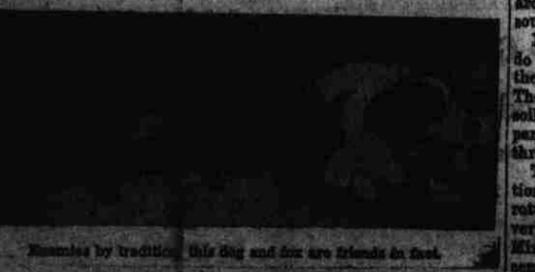

Pictured below Nellie and her feline brood is another odd animal affection. The Bible says that there'll come a time when the lion and the lamb shall lie down together, and here is the King of Beasts practicing up for the occasion with his boomer pal, a little black dog. Their owner is Mrs. A. J. Neaseth, of Oakland, Calif.

Furs or feathers, it really makes little difference. Above, an Australian Tabby throws a paw about her pal, the cockatoo. At right is a hen in a Chicago suburb. Deprived of her chicks, she adopted a brood of collie pups.

And just to prove once more that mother-love knows no bounds in animal life, we present this kind-hearted kitty who adopted a brood of feisty yellow chicks.

Named by tradition, this dog and fox are friends in fact.

Warns Against Sulfanilamide Medicine

Raleigh, Oct. 26.—"Numerous reports have been coming in from sections of the United States telling of the fatal effects of certain preparations of sulfanilamide. So far no such reports have been received from North Carolina," Dr. Carl V. Reynolds, State Health Officer, said here.

"While sulfanilamide is a very useful drug when administered and supervised by the practicing physician, the indiscriminate use of this product may be followed by serious reactions and in some instances may terminate fatally.

"Certain of these preparations have been used in the treatment of gonorrhea and have been found of value in a certain number of cases.

"North Carolina has a law covering this matter Section 1199 of the Consolidated Statutes reads as follows: 'TREATMENT EXCEPT BY PHYSICIAN UNLAWFUL. It shall be unlawful for any person except a duly licensed physician to prescribe or give away any medicine for the treatment of any person afflicted with a venereal disease.'

"The indiscriminate sale of this drug without a physician's prescription is therefore unlawful. An individual who buys this drug across the drug store counter is assuming the responsibility for his own treatment, which he is not qualified to do. The druggist who sells to such a patient is aiding and abetting this individual in such a dangerous procedure, and in addition to that, is violating one of our State laws. It seems to us that druggists throughout the State will be rendering a distinct service by complying strictly with the letter of the law and thereby placing the responsibility for the treatment of these individuals upon physicians who are aware of the dangers in the use of this drug and who are in position to supervise these cases under treatment."
