SOIL CONSERVATION

Guy A. Cardwell, Agricultural and Industrial Agent Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Co. Much attention should be given to the management of pastures to keep them in a condition for conserving the soil and furnishing grazing for livestock. New pastures should not be grazed until the growth is about four inches high. These pastures should be grazed lightly the first year; however, the growth should be kept down to four inches in height at all times. Stock should not graze on pastures when the land is wet enough to damage the turf. Avoid over-grazing of pastures at all times. Stock should be removed from heavily grazed pastures sufficiently early to allow a good cover before winter arrives. It is a good practice to provide a supplementary pasture of soybeans, cowpeas or sudan grass for use during the dry weather which often comes in late summer and early fall. Rye and oats may be used for early spring grazing to supplement pastures and prevent over-grazing.

All pastures should be top dressed with fertilizer and manure as soon as the soil is dry. An application of 200 to 400 pounds of 4-12-4 fertilizer per acre is recommended for average or below average land. On the better soils or on poorer soils that have had an application of manure, superphosphate should be used as the top dressing. The frequency and amount of top dressing to use will vary with conditions. The superphosphate may be applied at the rate of 400 to 500 pounds per acre should be applied every year. It may become necessary at times to apply additional fertilizer in places on a pasture. A complete mixture may be needed on bare areas but usually it will be necessary to apply only those varieties that are needed to supplement the established sod.

Pastures should be moved at least once each summer to keep down the weeds and briars. A heavily stocked pasture should have cattle droppings scattered once or oftener during the grazing season by running a harrow over it lightly. A pasture on soils subject to severe leaching caused by freezing during the winter would be benefited by running a roller over it in March.

The Duplin County Medical Society met Tuesday at 8 p. m. in the county health office at Kenansville with Dr. J. W. Farrier, Duplin County Negro President, presiding.

Negro Schools Look Forward to Good Years

The Duplin County Negro schools are ending their second months work. The school term of 1937-38 was opened with less fear on the part of the teachers than ever in the history of Duplin County. This was due to O. P. Johnson, our efficient County Superintendent, assisted by Mrs. Mamie L. Turner, full-time supervisor.

F. E. Williams was assigned to work in the Warsaw school, this was highly acceptable to him. He is well organized, and two units of work are being planned. F. E. Williams will write more about the work of Douglas High School at another writing.

County Agents Meet Friday

County Agent Reynolds attended a conference of county agents held at State College, in Raleigh, Friday, where they discussed means of handling the cotton situation and made some suggestions for the 1938 production control plan, although nothing definite was decided on for the curtailment plan.

TOUCH-DOWN TACTICS

TEXAS A. & M. . . .

by H. M. Norton, Head Football Coach

This is the fifth in a series of nine outstanding diagram plays by nine leading college coaches from Grantland Rice's Cities Service Football Guide.

WE have used so many forward passes and have been up against so many teams that pass that we decided to use a fake pass. We used it in most of our games with good results. We found that after throwing a few passes the average team was open for this fake pass and the result was that it was always good for a few yards. The features of this play are that our right and left half backs go deep down the field, as though they were to receive a pass, then the full back crosses over center and blocks out the defensive center and the quarter back takes the ball through the same opening.

We try to make this look as much like a pass play as possible. We have made several good gains and some first downs with it against our most formidable opponents. With a good passing combination any team can use it with equally good results.
