garden ? ANSWER. On the average

ANSWER. On the average soils, fertiliser may be broadcast at the rate of 2,000 pounds to the acre, but if applied in the furrow, the applications should not be greater than 1,000 pounds to the acre. Heavier applications may cause serious damage to the crops. If more fertilizer seems necessary, apply it in the form of a side dressing after the crops have become established. Side-dressings with readily available nitrogen fertilizers are often necarcsings with readily available nitrogen fertilisers are often neo-casary, especially with leafy vegetables such as cabbage, let-tuce, kale and spinach, but ex-cessive applications should not be made. Two moderate applications will give better sould rate applications will give better results when the fertilizer is applied in this way.

QUESTION: Does it pay to mate purebred birds to mongrel hens?

ANSWER: While this is quite a common practice in small farm flocks, the results are usually questionable as the mongrel hens questionable as the mongrel hens are usually so cross bred or in-bred that it is difficult to build good qualities in them. The best method is not to mate the mon-grel birds. If they are good layers it might be well to keep them for egg production, but the new flock should be started with purchared baby chicks: As the old hens fall off in production they should be sold ore used at home as food. All egg from this flock should be sold for consumption and not for hatching purposes.
