

Attack and Death on the Stalingrad Front

This dramatic picture was made as Soviet automatic rifleman attacked a Nazi outpost somewhere in the Stalingrad area. The photographer got right into the thick of the fight to get this picture of attack and death. One of the attacking Soviet soldiers flings his arms above his head and crumbles to the ground after being hit by a Nazi bullet. (Central Press)

Plan To Gather Scrap Through Winter Months

Plans for intensified scrap collection efforts during the winter months in rural areas are taking form throughout the nation, as State and local salvage committees survey the results of past campaigns and prepare for future activities, the chairman of the county salvage committee said.

War Production Board officials, in emphasizing the need for undiminished effort in the rural sections, the chairman said, "stress the fact that our agricultural areas are second only to industry as a source of iron and steel scrap, and if the steel are to operate at capacity throughout the coming months, large tonnages of rural scrap must continue to flow into the nation's scrap yards."

"Winter, they say, cannot be permitted to halt scrap collections any more than it will be allowed to interfere with naval and military operations on all fronts. The men in the fighting forces, it is pointed out, will carry on despite rain, snow, ice and mud, defense industries will continue to operate regardless of weather, and scrap collection must keep pace with both. Farm equipment dealers at their annual state conventions this fall are expected to emphasize this new phase of the scrap campaign. The implement men, he said, have played an important part in the National Scrap Harvest, which has been responsible for moving large tonnages of farm scrap into productive channels, and they plan to continue their efforts throughout the winter months.

"Winter scrap collection is no picnic," said Eric H. Marks, head of the Farm Scrap Unit of the General Salvage Section in Washington, "but neither is the job of the seamen who man the ships of North Atlantic convoys in bitter weather. We civilians, Marks said, 'must do our jobs with the same fortitude and disregard for personal comfort that is characteristic of the men in the armed forces.'"

Definite plans for the winter scrap campaign will be announced by all our county and local salvage chairmen before the present phase of the National Scrap Harvest is completed, the chairman said.

U. D. C. Meeting at Home of Mrs. Henry Stevens

The James Kenan Chapter United Daughters of the Confederacy met in the home of the President, Mrs. H. L. Stevens, Jr., Tuesday, October 27th. After the ritual led by the chaplain, Mrs. D. E. Best and a song and pledge to the flag by the assembly, the business of the afternoon was considered. The two committees appointed at the last meeting made their reports, the nominating committee to the effect that the officers of the year had accepted nomination for service during the coming year.

Mrs. N. B. Boney, read the resolution of respect drawn up for the late Mrs. R. V. Wells, of Kenansville, who had worked earnestly for many years in the organization. The program was along educational lines, as pertaining to our state and county. Mrs. Charles Carroll presented an extremely interesting history of the University of North Carolina touching the high-lights of its development, and introducing many of the more unusual incidents in connection with this institution's long and determined career. She also presented many pictures, which were illustrative.

Mrs. Norwood Boney, then discussed in detail the efforts throughout the years to provide for the education of youth in our own county. There were approximately twenty of these schools of varying fame, both which were all important to the growth of the county, among which the best known were of course, Grove Academy, James Sprunt Institute, and what is now the Warsaw high school.

During the social hour, which followed the conclusion of the program, Mrs. Stevens together with Mrs. L. P. Best, Mrs. R. H. Best Sr., and Mrs. J. T. Gresham, Sr., who were joint hostesses, served attractive and delicious refreshments in keeping with the spirit of Halloween. The guest of the meeting was Mrs. William Nichols of California, and the Marine Base in Onslow county, who was visiting Mrs. Stevens.

Essay prizes of $5 each were won by Mrs. Henry Stevens, and Mrs. Harvey Boney, Mrs. Stevens' Essay was on "Kirk-Holden Wall," Mrs. Harvey Boney's on General Hoke.

NFLA Agent For E War Saving Bonds

The local National Farm Loan Association office has now qualified as issuing agent for Series E war savings bonds. Mr. J. W. Burton, Secretary-Treasurer, stated today. We are glad to render this additional service and make it convenient for farmers as well as others to buy war bonds. In addition to producing food vital to victory, farmers are anxious to give direct financial aid to our country and at the same time build up reserves for the future. By buying war bonds they are combining their

Two Duplin Boys Complete Training at Annapolis of the Air

Charles R. Elwell, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Elwell of Magnolia and DeLeon Robinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. V. D. Robinson of Rose Hill, who enlisted in the Navy last month at the Raleigh recruiting office, have recently completed preliminary training at the Naval Air Station in Pensacola, Fla., the "Annapolis of the Air," according to an announcement from the public relations office of that station.

Upon completion of this primary training, they were assigned to duty there.

They are included among the many men in the Navy today who have voluntarily joined their country's fighting force; for service wherever they may be needed & at the same time, have the opportunity of building their futures in profitable, established trades.
