"Do's and Don'ts" for Your Success in Canning Tomatoes

The huge number of new home canners who sail through with flying colors, while those who boast of years of experience flounder, is amazing. Or is it? Gladys Kimbrough, Home Service Director for Ball Brothers Company, manufacturers of glass fruit jars, sees nothing unusual in the situation because she finds it far easier to teach a person who has never canned than to "unteach" one backed by years of haphazard experience.

To prove her point, Miss Kimbrough calls attention to the fact that tomatoes rate top place in both ease of canning and spoilage after canning. What's the answer? Sheer carelessness plus old-fashioned open-kettle canning. Anybody can rig up a water-bath canner for processing fruits and tomatoes. A lard can or a wash boiler, fitted with some sort of platform to hold the jar half an inch or so from the bottom of the utensil is all that is needed for a water-bath.

Carelessness Causes Spoilage
Spoilage of water-bath processed tomatoes is usually traceable to carelessness in selection and preparation or failure to follow the manufacturer's latest instructions. Pre-war instructions should in most instances be forgotten. Remembering them gets a lot of old-timers into trouble.

Tomatoes should ripen on the vine and be used as soon as they are firm ripe. They should be canned the day they are gathered, but if kept cool they may stand as much as 24 hours before processing. This is mentioned because some persons must depend upon a market for their supply. Any tomato containing a decayed spot, no matter how small, should be discarded. Canning those from which such spots have been removed leads to spoilage. Sound over-ripe ones and those from which small spots have been cut may be made into chili sauce or ketchup—never, never into juice. Juice requires sound tomatoes.

The jars, caps, rubbers, and canner should be ready before one prepares the tomatoes. Every tomato should be carefully washed before it is scalded for skinning. If you have no wire basket, a square of cheese cloth will serve the purpose of holding tomatoes for scalding. Simply put enough tomatoes for filling one or two jars on the cloth, catch up the four ends of the square, and hold the "bag" in boiling water from one-half to one minute. Then, if you like, dip the bag in cold water, making it a little easier to remove the skins. Next use a sharp pointed knife to remove every bit of the core, slip the skins, cut away any green or white spots and drop the tomato into a clean hot jar. Cut tomatoes if they won't go in whole. After two or three tomatoes are in the jar, press them with a clean wooden spoon (one which has been boiled) until they crack and the juice runs out to fill the spaces between the fruit. Yes, "fruit" is right. We call these vegetables because they grow in gardens. When the jar has been filled to within

PHEW! AIN'T IT HOT?

INSURE CANNING SUCCESS!
The cold pack, water-bath processed method is probably preferred by the majority of authorities on the subject but for the last few years there has been a trend toward hot packing.

Selection and preparation for hot packing is the same as for cold packing. After the cores and skins are removed, the tomatoes are quartered and cooked until they have boiled gently for 5 minutes. Then they are put into hot jars and processed 20 minutes in a hot-water bath canner.

Ball Tomatoes Slowly
Open kettle? That's what causes most of the spoilage! Those who are not willing to adopt the more modern methods should remember that the prepared tomatoes should be boiled slowly for 20 minutes, then poured into hot jars. The kettle of tomatoes and the pans of water holding jars, caps, and rubbers, should stay over the heat so that a jar may be lifted out of boiling water, placed on a cloth folded in a pan, then filled with boiling tomatoes, and sealed lightning quick.

"More Pulpwood is absolutely essential to victory over Japan"
says J. A. KRUG, Chairman, War Production Board

"V-E Day is past. We're now headed for V-J Day. We need more pulpwood production in order to carry the war to Japan. Pulpwood will help win complete Victory, and that is why it is on the Production Urgency List of the armed forces, War Production Board and War Manpower Commission.

"The 1945 goal set by War Production Board is higher than for 1944, yet pulpwood production so far has been running short of what we must get to the mills.

"The current critical need for pulpwood production is due to the greater number of packages and containers needed on the long ocean haul of military supplies to Pacific war theaters. Extra protection must be given war material against insects, fungus and the hot, humid climate of battle areas by the use of waterproof packaging made of pulpwood.

"Here are the hard facts: "Pulpwood which should have been produced last winter and spring must be cut this summer and fall. Cutting pulpwood is necessary to cut short the war."
