Monopolism Norway has little government-managed industry, as such. The only things wholly owned and operated by the government are the post office, telephone and telegraph, electric power, and railroads. There seems to be no agitation for extension of government ownership and management. In fact, some leaders feel the trend is in the other direction and that the government has shown no ability to provide efficient service.

However, cooperatives are numerous in Norway. Entirely different from government management, they nevertheless control the buying and selling of almost everything and are monopolistic in nature. The effective organizations of the co-ops, while individually owned, have been used in some instances for extension of government control. Subsidies have been offered to farmers' cooperatives in an effort to please everybody: the producers with higher prices and the purchasers with low prices.

Wait 'Til You're Old The completeness of the cooperative monopoly may be seen in the association of drug store operators, to which all operators belong. To open a new drug store a man would first have to become a member of the association and get its approval, after which he would appeal to the government for a license. The government could never grant a license unless the applicant were admitted to the association.

Drug store operators admit no new members except at their own pleasure, and then seldom except to replace a member who has died. I was told that an aspirant to the drug industry can seldom be admitted to the association and obtain permission to operate his own store before he is 45 years old.

Plenty of Frontiers A successful business man in Oslo, who was a prominent leader of the resistance during the war, is in charge of an old firm with an excellent reputation. Said he: "The regulations have come to interfere with everything. I am no longer really doing business. I just sit here and do what they tell me I can do. In my opinion, the controls are a failure. They make production more expensive and prices higher."

Under the right kind of economic climate, the Norwegian people could raise their standard of living. And this right climate Communism can never provide. Norway does not lack for frontiers. Their farms produce as many bushels of grain per acre as our farms. The fishing waters of Norway are not surpassed. Possibilities for electric power are the best in the world. Manufacturing and lumbering offer only the ordinary difficulties. The country is not over populated. Yet their standard of living is not more than half as high as that in America.

There Is a Way Out When forward looking Norwegians try to modernize an industry, they are met squarely with the deadening hand of monopoly, either private or public. If one fishing company manages to find a way to sell its products at a good price, while another company exports its fish to Europe for a lower price, the former company pays a tax which goes to the second company for the sake of equalization.

This policy invariably discourages confidence and tends to stultify. A pessimism is thus placed on the industry and on farmers to make matters. But a realistic incentive system, based upon honest competition, would result in a more efficient use of the nation's resources and a higher standard of living.

DESTINATION: THE ORPHANAGE

A MOTHER DIES, as her eighth child is born; and all 8 children must be "hipped-off" to "The Orphanage."

She could not get into a hospital. She was attended only by a midwife. She died! Yet, expert post-mortems said: "This Mother would have lived with a minimum of medical attention." And eight children would be living in their own home, today, instead of in "The Orphanage."

Horrible? Yes, and yet similar things happen in North Carolina almost every day. Records show that in 40 other states a Mother has a better chance of surviving childbirth than a Mother has in North Carolina. . . . Only 17 out of every 100 "rural Mothers" have their babies in hospitals.

Also 25% of our Mothers in rural areas do not have a doctor when their babies are born . . . 15,000 babies a year are delivered by midwives in this State. . . . Is there any wonder that our people are so solidly behind The Good Health Plan?
