Wages and Prices

About 13 months ago Mr. Henry Wallace, then Secretary of Commerce under President Truman, asserted that wages in the automobile industry could go up 30 per cent without prices of cars going up at all. It wasn't true, as all informed people knew at the time. But the statement tended to gain public support.

At least the statement helped gain public toleration for a long strike, which ended with about a 20 per cent raise in wages. But even then the OPA was immediately convinced that increases in prices were made necessary. Little by little the OPA raised the prices on cars until it had granted an average increase of 22 per cent. In short, for a 20 per cent increase in wages for auto workers the public was required, by OPA, to pay 22 per cent more for cars.

Same Play Again

Now the auto workers are asking for another raise of about 25 per cent in wages. Mr. C. E. Wilson, president of General Motors, asserts that such a raise will also put prices of cars up by 25 per cent. Mr. Alfred P. Slonn, chairman of the board of General Motors, also declares that wages cannot be raised without raising prices.

Some labor leaders are maintaining that wages in general can go up about 25 per cent without increasing prices. From last year's experience the public will quite readily understand that if wages go up again, prices must also go up. This leaves just one real issue. Is it to the interest of workers and the rest of the public for prices to keep going up and up?

Tit for Tat

Some unions are now declaring that the raises they got last year are already neutralized by increased prices of the things they must buy. This is evidently true. Now if another raise in wages is granted, only to be followed by a still greater boost in prices, workers will be no better off. In fact they, and all the rest of us, will be worse off. Higher prices will finally cause buying to drop off, leading to unemployment and finally to depression.

There is a way for everybody to gain — both workers and the general public. That way is for management and workers to cooperate to increase production so effectively that goods will become plentiful and prices will go down.

The Sound Way

Then the workers will have the equivalent of a real raise in wages because their present wages will buy more food and clothing. All of the public will benefit in the same way. This is sound economics. But for wages to keep going up and up, only to be followed by prices going up and up, is unfortunate for workers and everybody else.

If we want to destroy the American economic order and force our country into state socialism, that is the way to do it. Fifteen months ago many wondered anxiously if Henry Wallace believed that wages could go up 30 per cent in any industry without raising prices. Many now operative for American Remittances to Europe, Inc. Through CARE, this food package and a blanket package may be sent to friends, relatives and members of special groups in 12 European countries for only $10.00 each.

Undersecretary of Agriculture Norris E. Dodd said, "The average European's diet is one of deadly monotony. Relief of that monotony must be one of the greatest joys of those who receive CARE food packages."

Paul C. French, general manager of CARE, explained that the organization will have delivered 45 million pounds of food in Europe by the end of March, on order from individual Americans who sent CARE parcels. This food, he said, was contained in the former CARE package, originally prepared for the Army and purchased through the War Assets Administration.

"These packages will be exhausted by the end of March," Mr. French said. "The improved food situation enabled us to develop the new package for delivery beginning about April 1st. This new package will be delivered in Europe at the same low cost of ten dollars."

Mrs. Edgar Ansel Mowrer, writer and Washington civic leader, reminded listeners that helping to relieve distress in Europe was one way to win the peace. "We must never forget that starvation was deliberately planned as a means of reducing the next generation. If we do not share a little of our great abundance, it will show that we are still blind as we were before the war. Shutting our eyes to possible future world developments is a costly error as we should know."

CARE offers us an opportunity to save the children of countries whose population is drastically reduced," Mrs. Mowrer said.

Meeting Friday Night
Some of the farm leaders and tobacco growers are deeply concerned about the possibility of losing a portion of the export markets for flue cured tobacco.

There will be a meeting at the Court House in Kenansville, Friday night, March 14, at 8 o'clock. At this meeting, a representative from the State Farm Bureau Office in Greensboro will discuss this problem.

The flue cured tobacco growers are dependent on export markets for approximately 50 percent of their production. It is considered the judgment of many tobaccoists along with leading farmers that we have a definite responsibility in trying to protect our interest to the fullest extent. Unless this is done, our export outlets will possibly diminish and that will necessarily reduce the amount of to-

Mrs. Whittle Is Hostess To Club

Mrs. L. S. Whittle delightfully entertained her bridge club and several additional guests Wednesday afternoon at her home on Pine Street.

Yellow jonquils and other early spring flowers decorated auxiliary tables and made an attractive setting for the two tables in play. When scores were tallied Mrs. Robert Blackmore received a novelty contract scoring pencil for scoring high; Mrs. Paul Berry received a pot holder for the traveling award, received for taking tricks with the two-eyed Jack; and Miss Vera Hamilton won a candy dish for visitors high.

The hostess served a tempting frozen fruit salad course with coffee.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Duff of Pink Hill announce the birth of a daughter, Geraldine, on March 8. Mrs. Duff is the former Miss Mae Kennedy.

Announce Birth

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Barthelot announce the birth of a daughter, Beverly Sue, on March 10, 1947. Mrs. Barthelot is the former Miss Willie Mae Dail of Warsaw.

It is our hope that we can grow in this county. Every one should attend this meeting Friday night. Blue Mold

The first occurrence of Blue Mold in North Carolina was reported from Columbus County on March 3. With the late crop of plants that we are likely to have in this area, growers should prepare to start treating for blue mold when their plants are the size of a dime. Fermate is available in ample quantity this year and a further delay can be avoided if the material is used according to directions.
