Mrs. Sadler Is Hostess To Buffet Supper

Mrs. Emory Sadler was hostess to the members of her bridge club on last Thursday night at a buffet supper. Upon arrival of the guests the hostess served baked ham, potato salad, tomato and lettuce, pickled beets, hot rolls and chocolate pie for dessert. The guests then played bridge. When scores were tallied, Miss Martha Pickett was awarded toilet water for scoring high and Mrs. Woodrow Brinson, second high was given stationery. Miss Lela McDonald was a guest for the occasion.

Mrs. Taylor Entertains Teachers

On last Wednesday evening, Mrs. Woodrow Taylor entertained the faculty of the Kenansville school at a buffet supper. Her home was attractively decorated with dog wood, yellow jasmine, wisteria and azalea. The dining room table was artistically arranged and a menu consisting of fried chicken, rice and gravy, butter beans, tossed salad, and hot rolls were served. After the main course, the hostess served apple pie a-la-mode.

Trouble in Britain

England has gone down for a small count. That of course is no reason why anybody should be ready with the old "I-told-you-so." However, some observations are in order. Outstanding Englishmen have been outspoken during the fuel crisis current in their country. An examination of the underlying causes of the crisis in England ought to make a good treatise favoring the American economic system.

In England or anywhere else in the world, it is my feeling that little or nothing along the socialist order is to be found there that we would wish to adopt in America. Even before the coal and power crisis reached the terrible proportions of mid-February, the British were being urged by critics within their own realm to abandon plans for further nationalization.

National Suicide?

Mr. Shinwell, minister of fuel and power, along with Sir Stafford Cripps, president of the Board of Trade, asked that the country forego any further reorganization of the electric power industry. The idea behind their plea was that British industry could not afford to be exposed to the uncertainties and hazards that would accompany more experimentation. It was time for danger signals to go up.

The government, it was stressed, would have to concentrate on the task of preserving the economic life of England. Another warning came from a prominent religious leader. The English people were confronted, he said, by immense danger in the planned society becoming so common. If more and more orders had to be issued "about which the people would have to put up with and obey," it would be the beginning of national suicide.

Result of Planning

The British do not lack coal because they have no plan. Socialism is full of plans. The coal mines are there, too. What socialism forgets, however, is that private and personal initiative, meaning hard work and high production, make up the factors that insure economic stability. English miners can never dig coal with paper plans. Men dig and distribute coal to consumers of fuel largely because of various incentives.

Not the least of these incentives is that men make money in the process of getting the coal out of the ground. But a nation does not get rid of monopoly by making the monopoly one of government. The same products of socialism and communism, with their monopolies of government, have been low standards of living and meager production.

Best Statesmanship

Thing to remember is that no anti-trust laws can reach this kind of monopoly. It takes either revolution or world conflict to sweep out these monopolistic governments, and they become entrenched by long habit.

Responsibility falls with increasing weight upon America. These duties lie most fully now in the part we must play in making our free and dynamic economy, without limit.

"Flowers of the South"

Thousands of beauty-lovers are paying a Springtime visit to the lower Cape Fear river, 15 miles south of Wilmington, N. C., where the world-famous Orton plantation and gardens are at the peak of bloom. Stately Orton mansion, constructed in 1725, and admired by thousands as one of the loveliest plantation houses in the South, is shown above in its picturesque setting of spreading trees and multi-colored blossoms. Orton acres, extending back from the banks of the Cape Fear through miles of the Carolina countryside, now are covered by more than 1,000 late-blooming camellias, 100,000 azaleas, hyacinth, daffodils, wisteria, dogwood and other plants, all bordering more than two miles of walks around the plantation's 25 acres of gardens and nurseries.
