AT HOME ON THE FARM WITH THE CITY COUSIN

I have heard of sows dropping all male litters of pigs, but this 23 year old cow that refuses to have anything but heifer calves came as a jolt.

Checking closely on this phenomenon to determine if old Bossy was doing this just to be stubborn or if she had some ulterior motive in mind—like boosting Union County's milk production, I found my way to Monroe, where Price Brawley, assistant farm agent, sought to get me an interview with the aging cow.

All I wanted to know was why, in 18 instances, the cow's off-spring have all been girl-calves. I understand that in no other way can a cow so warm the heart of its owner. This being the case, Bossy should be convinced of the importance of passing this top-secret information to others.

Well, when we got out to the Carl Trull farm there she was, having a contented chew for herself down by the fence. We have all seen prettier Jersey cows, but I doubt seriously if I will ever see another that won't have at least ONE bull calf out of 18.
