Here We Are Again

430 progressive farm families this year are enrolled in Better Farming For Better Living compared to 350 in 1947. To those of you who are enrolled for the first time, we extend a hearty welcome. To the many who re-enrolled, we extend our best wishes for your continued progress. To the agricultural and business leaders serving on county BFBL councils, we say "howdy", there is a wonderful opportunity for service in helping to build a prosperous and satisfying agriculture. With farm folks, business and professional people and agricultural leaders all pulling together, Southeastern North Carolina will soon be recognized as a leader in the field of agricultural and community development.

These monthly newsletters will be written throughout the remainder of the year. It is hoped that they will help you to see some of the outstanding and interesting accomplishments of farm folks in the 13 county area. Any suggestions that you may have or news items of interest will be welcome. This year one of the goals of BFBL councils is to see that someone visits every family enrolled and to have at the years end (Nov. 1, 1948) a suitable county achievement luncheon, banquet or barbecue for all who complete the record book. We've gotten off to a good start this year, let's make it a banner year for our farms and aim toward the highest goal of achievement.

Some folks say that Wallace is one of the most progressive towns in S. E. N. C. I won't argue the point. Certainly the Junior Chamber of Commerce is seeing to it that progress is made. This year BFBL is one of their projects as well as the Duplin County Corn Growing Contest. This fall they plan a real celebration to honor those who take part in these two programs. And, they don't do things half way. I know, because I attended the Strawberry Jamboree which they sponsored. There are 41 farm families enrolled in Duplin this year as compared to 30 in 1947.
