New Lift-Type Disc Harrow

TWO OLD FARMING PROBLEMS—transporting disc harrows and controlling depth of the harrow in the field—have been solved by the application of hydraulic power. Pictured above is the new lift-type, rigid-frame, tandem disc harrow described as a new and completely modern design by engineers at Dearborn Motors Corporation, Detroit. Flexibility of gangs is eliminated, and gangs are set permanently at the most effective working angle of 20 degrees. Depth of penetration is regulated hydraulically. Because the harrow is attached to the tractor and is carried by it, all one has to do to transport it is to raise it hydraulically and drive away.
