someone say she was going to "walk off" that soda, or exercise that piece of pie away? Experts now come up with the fact that walking briskly for one mile burns up only 100 calculations. the fact that walking brisky for one mile burns up only 100 calories! Walk-ing thirty-six miles would take off ap-proximately one pound. If you don't know what a calorie is these figures will give you some idea: a breakfast bun is 350; a waffle is 225; an ice cream soda, 350; a malted milk 450! On the other side of the ledger are more encouraging figures: a cup of consommé is only 26 calories; glass of grapefrult is only 26 calories; glass of grapetruit juice, 80; orange juice, 85; and tomato juice, 40. So, if you are trying to scale down to the willowy leveliness of a Ruth Roman who appears in RKO Radio's forthcoming melodrama, "The Window," just reach for a glass of tomato or fruit juice instead of another spoonful of chocolate syrup.
