THE AMERICAN WAY

FREEDOM IS NOT FREE

By: Maurice R. Franks
RELEASED BY GEORGE PECK

(Editor's Note: M. R. Franks is Director of the National Labor-Management Foundation and Editor of its official publication, PARTNERS.)

In speaking of free enterprise, too few of us seem to realize its significance, what it stands for, how it came about and what it means to our American way of life. A poll was taken on this subject a few years ago to determine the attitude of the man on the street towards free enterprise. The poll disclosed some interesting opinions. Few participants understood the real meaning of this system. Some of the answers were so vague as to be practically blank others were downright ludicrous. When one man was asked what he thought of free enterprise, he replied with that well-known dumb, astonished look, "They ought to put a tax on it." Another, when questioned, retorted, "If it's free, it can't be any good."

By and large, we Americans, who have so greatly benefited by this system, have become so accustomed to it that we take it completely for granted and make the simple assumption that it always was and always will be with us.

But free enterprise was not always here and, if certain forces have their way, it is slated for an early demise. The Socialists and Communists do not believe in free enterprise as we Americans know it and, whether they be pink or red, are leaving no stone unturned to discredit it and deliver it onto the junk heap in exchange for a system of state control, similar to that in effect in Soviet Russia and her satellite nations.

This, if nothing else, should remind us that freedom of enterprise, like our other basic freedoms, does not contain the germ of its own immortality. The blood and sweat which brought it into being cry aloud for eternal vigilance.

We Americans proudly boast—and rightly, too—that we are the greatest nation on earth. But I wonder how many of us have taken time out to discover why we can claim such stature. Well, one of the chief reasons for our national greatness lies in our adherence to the system of free enterprise—the system which, through its natural creation of incentive, profit, has promoted the highest initiative yet known to man. Under this particular economy, the most of the best for the least is made available, with the result that we Americans are conspicuously well off, as compared to the citizens of other nations. Our standard of living, irrespective of our station in life, is one of almost royal enjoyment. However, in order to preserve this system—the system of profit and loss—we must likewise pay a price.

And that price is industrial and personal integrity—the honest will to deliver an honest day's work for an honest day's pay.

In a word, our precious freedom of enterprise, if it is to survive the forces that would destroy it, must be fully and conscientiously paid for through our conscientious adherence to the principle of fair dealing, all around. The motto of free enterprise can never be, "Business is business, and Devil take the sucker"; it must be, "Business can be business so long as it has a heart."

Paradoxical as it may appear on the surface, and whether we wish to accept the fact or not, we must pay a price for freedom. And that price when understood by one and all, means that the freedom of the other fellow is the only basis for our own. The price of freedom is conscience; FREEDOM ISN'T FREE.

He was conscious to the last.

With his passing the family has lost companionship; the church and community a Christian leader.

He lived consistently a religious leader, an example which many should follow. He leaves to mourn, his wife, three sisters, and a host of nieces and nephews. *****
